MELLON, REED SPLIT OVER DEBT CUTS

Today

Something Stays Up.
Mrs. Patterson Announces.
War, Expensive Luxury.
Our Dollar Is Too Dear.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

BALTIMORE, Dec. 12.

THIS IS written on the Pennsylvania Railroad train between Washington and Baltimore. Beautiful warm weather in this region. The giant airship Akron, a credit to the United States and to the Goodyear Company that made it, has been floating around the air above the Capitol, White House, Washington and Lincoln monuments, for hours.

Perhaps it comforts those that have been reading Wall street reports to know that SOMETHING will stay up.

MRS. ELEANOR PATTERSON, who owns one-quarter of the Chicago Tribune, and is editor of W. R. Hearst's Washington Herald, would like you to know that the Washington Sunday Herald in 10 months of this year has gained 231,195 lines of local advertising, as compared with 1930, while her two Sunday competitors have lost 135,454 and 118,276 lines respectively.

Editor Patterson is a good newspaper man, as is her brother, Joseph Medill Patterson. They inherited part of that from their grandfather, Joseph Medill, and the rest of it from their father, who long was publisher of the Chicago Tribune.

WAR DOES NOT PAY whether you lose or win, or, like ourselves, help others to win.

You shudder when you learn the national government this year will spend $4,219,000,000.

Of that amount nearly $3,000,000,000, or to be exact, $2,702,415,000 are SPENT FOR WARS PAST AND TO COME.

This year the people paid to veterans of former wars $947,243,000.

This amount will increase by tens of millions next year.

EVERYTHING THAT the government does, all its expenses, except the cost of war, cost this country $1,148,000,000 less than the war cost.

And still President Hoover has managed to cut more than $350,000,000 from the budget, in spite of the fact that war costs can't be touched.

PROF. FISCHER, of Yale, says "lack of leadership" is our trouble and the slump would be 90 per cent less violent if the late Mr. Strong were still head of the Federal Reserve Board.

This, with all respect for the learned professor, is difficult to accept.

MR. STRONG took advice and those that gave it are still alive. Why don't THEY diminish the slump by 90 per cent?

Mr. Strong couldn't miraculously change a small amount of gold monopolized by France and the United States into enough money to run the world's business.

Possibly, as Prof. Fischer says, "Henry Ford or Mr. Rockefeller and a few other persons big enough" might improve conditions. But they could not enable 1,000,000 human beings, without gold, to buy from this gold standard country.

UNTIL THE thousand million and more human beings that have no gold are able to produce money that we will accept, they cannot buy from us, and we cannot sell to them.

This writer, who was in Canada Thursday, was assured that Canadian importers must buy less and less from the United States, more and more from Britain. Our expensive money is beyond their reach.

Traveling from city to city, to big New York, you learn from the last edition of the Baltimore Evening News and other papers, what has been going on in the world. It is all fairly exciting.

ALBERT H. WIGGIN, head of the Chase National Bank, biggest in the world, is in Berlin, wondering what the Germans are going to do about money borrowed from private American citizens. You will learn that the Germans intend to do almost anything except PAY. The resourceful Germans have invented a new name for what we call "frozen funds."

Their expression is "standstill money." Intelligent Germans gathered in $1,500,000,000 of that standstill cash, and it will probably stand still where it is for a long time.

THE SUGGESTION in this column that it would be wise not to accept any statement about former Gov. Smith and the presidency without hearing from him, is verified by the news.

While Gov. Roosevelt was returning to New York City, former Gov. Smith was having luncheon with delegations and leaders from Massachusetts, New Jersey and Rhode Island, asking him to run for President in 1932 and guaranteeing to deliver delegates.

Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, one of the leaders, can deliver what he promises.

FROM TOKIO, the Associated Press brings the news that the Japanese cabinet has resigned. In time of trouble, the army takes charge in Japan, deals directly with the Mikado and brushes aside the government of civilians. The Associated Press says that Japan's gold basis is endangered, and may be abandoned.

That is very sad for those in whose minds the gold standard is as important as the left hind foot of a graveyard rabbit.

OUR OWN particular kind of civilization is illustrated in the news from the federal prison in Leavenworth. Seven convicts

DEATH DATE SET FOR POWERS

'Bluebeard' Execution on March 18 Ordered; Court Fixes Limit for Appeal

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Harry F. Powers today was sentenced to die on the gallows at the penitentiary at Moundsville next March 18.

Judge John C. Southern imposed the extreme penalty after overruling a motion for a new trial filed by the defense Thursday when Powers was convicted of the first degree murder of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, Northboro (Mass.) divorcee.

The judge, in his decision, declared:

"I have no changes to make in my previous rulings in this case."

He apparently referred to his rejection several weeks ago of a defense motion for a change of venue.

APPEAL LIMIT

The Judge specified the time of the execution as "between sunup and sundown."

The court gave Powers until March 1 to appeal to the Harrison County Circuit Court.

11 SEAMEN LOST, RAFT SAVES 2

OSLO, Norway, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Eleven British seamen, members of the crew of the German-owned trawler Venus, which sank off the Norwegian coast, were reported missing today, together with the trawler's commander, Capt. Visnaerotsky, and a German member of the crew.

MAALOEY, Norway, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—A raft bearing two desperate, half-frozen seamen and the bodies of four of their dead comrades drifted ashore near here today from an unidentified German steamer which grounded and sank quickly. The crew was said to have consisted of 32 men.

A motorboat set out to search for additional survivors. All of the members of the crew except the six on the raft were reported packed into two boats as the ship went down. A lifebuoy was picked up bearing the name Venus.

Police said the Coast Guard had been searching for a German trawler named Venus, suspected as a rum runner. The captain had the same name as the master of the vessel which was wrecked.

FOUR SAVED FROM FIRE; BOY HURT

Dogs Arouse Castle Shannon Neighbors; Parents, Two Sons Carried From Home

A family of four, trapped on the porch roof of their burning Castle Shannon home, were rescued at 2 a. m. today by neighbors who had been aroused by the barking of their two hunting dogs.

One boy, 7, was burned about the feet before he could be taken from the roof.

The house, a two-story frame at Havelock avenue and Broadway, was occupied by Joseph Bartosch, his wife and two sons, Joseph, Jr., 7, and Emil, 6. Bartosch was aroused by smoke, and when he found escape down the stairs cut off by fire and smoke, led his family to the porch roof. Emil was burned.

Meanwhile, Midge and Cricket, hounds of Thomas Melvin, across the street, were aroused by the glare of the fire from the burning house, and began barking.

Melvin and his son, Norman, 22, were awakened and ran to the rescue of the trapped family.

Firemen under Capt. Leo Schenot, of the Castle Shannon department, battled several hours before they subdued the flames. Loss was placed at $4,100.

FOUR ARRESTED AS INN ROBBERS

A robber gang, which police said was responsible for almost a score of holdups and robberies in the western end of the county, including the Thanksgiving Day raid on the Green Ball Inn, near Imperial, was under arrest today. Police said the four members had confessed to 12 robberies and holdups, after about $500 worth of plunder had been recovered.

The prisoners are Frank Bernhart, 21, and John Hart, 22, both of Glendale; Steve Longstrath, 23, and John King, 21, both of Carnegie. They were arrested by County Detective R. L. McMillen, Chief Christ Keisling, of Carnegie, and Chief E. M. Hartness, of Oakdale.

They were charged with highway robbery and robbery before Justice of the Peace A. W. McMillen, of Carnegie. Although Thomas Munday, proprietor of the Green Ball Inn, failed to identify any of the prisoners, police say Hart admitted the robbery.

Leavenworth Prison Seethes After Daring Convict Flight Fatal to 3

Bloodhounds on Trail Of Mail Robber Who Escaped

International News Service.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Dec 12.—An ominous tension blanketed the "big house" today. It was the taut calm that followed the federal penitentiary's most violent insurrection, marked by the death of three fleeing convicts, the recapture of three others, the abduction and wounding of the warden and the disappearance of a seventh prisoner.

Beneath the still surface of military order official activity seethed as the authorities began gathering up the loose ends of the bloody outbreak. Several mysterious aspects of the prison break remained to be solved, not the least of which were:

1—Where and how did the six freedom-seeking convicts obtain their weapons?

2—Who shot and killed three of the escaping prisoners in a hotly besieged farmhouse, eight miles from the prison?

3—Who shot and wounded Warden Thomas B. White?

4—Where is Earl Thayer, the convict who was discovered missing in a checkup after the frustrated break?

The three fleeing convicts, surrounded and captured in a woods, were placed in heavy irons after their return to the prison. The men, Charles Berta, Stanley Brown and Tom Underwood, stubbornly refused in the face of a steady grilling, to reveal the man-

Stand Brings First Break With Secretary; Mills Asks Assurance to Europe

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—President Hoover day threw every energy into an intense struggle to bring the hostile Congress around to revision of the European war debts.

The spectacular outburst against further relief for Europe at the expense of this country, joined in by administration stalwarts as well as Democratic leaders, caused for the first time a break between Secretary Mellon and Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania. Mellon picked up the Hoover cause last night with an answer as severe as any he has made in his 11 years of exchanges with Congress. He said:

"What inteligent business man or banker would blindly refuse to investigate or to consider the altered circumstances of a debtor whose unsecured obligation he held?"

Today Mellon's under-secretary, Ogden Mills, asked Senate leaders of both parties to agree on a statement to European nations permitting them to suspend their debt payments due on Tuesday

WOODWARD OUT AGAINST DAVIS

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 12.—(INS.)—George Woodward, state senator from the Germantown-Chestnut Hill district in Philadelphia, revealed today that he would oppose United States Senator James J. Davis in the next election. Dr. Woodward announced his plans in a whimsical article appearing in Pennsylvania Legislator, his own publication.

In the article he compared Davis to Goliath and himself to David with "a sling shot and five pebbles."

Dr. Woodward said his candidacy depended upon a number of things, which included the probable actions of former Senator George Wharton Pepper, William S. Vare and Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler. He said if any one of them decided to oppose Davis he would not be a candidate.

He intimated that he would take a firm stand against prohibition and not be "foggy like the former Secretary of Labor."

Her sister, Mrs. P. A. Wymore, of Huntington, W. Va., by her side, ministered to her until they reached the hospital, where physicians and nurses took charge. Mother and baby were reported doing well.

HOOVER SUMS UP PROSPERITY PLANS, ASKS PUBLIC AID

RESTORE OLD JOBS, AIM OF PRESIDENT

Tax Raise, Relief Steps Stressed in Program; Non-Partisan Appeal Made

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12 —(AP.)— Every shoulder is wanted at the wheel by President Hoover in enacting, on a non-partisan basis, his entire domestic program for economic recovery.

He called in newspapermen last night, read them an incisive summary of everything he has proposed, told them he cared little about details but emphasized principles, and addressed through them an urgent plea to Congress and to the whole people to join in united action.

"Definite program for stopping the tide of deflation," was Mr. Hoover's estimate of his plans. He lumped together into a dozen short definitions the recommendations he made in his message to Congress, others he has expounded in months past. Some are in effect today, he said.

"The broad purpose of this program is to restore the old job, instead of create a made job, to help the worker at the desk as well as the bench, to restore their buying power for the farmers' products—in fact turn the processes of liquidation and deflation and start the country forward all along the line."

SEES PROBLEMS SOLVED

He told them America could by his program, solve its own difficulties to a large extent, regardless of what happened abroad.

The program he summed up included: Reduction of federal expenditures and temporary tax increase; united local unemployment relief; continued part time employment; strengthened federal land banks; credit assistance to home owners; partial return of deposits in closed banks; enlargement of federal reserve discount limits; the emergency reconstruction finance corporation; aid to railroads; new banking law safeguard to depositors; credit safeguards to banks themselves; and "maintenance of individual initiative and individual and community responsibility."

The President said his emergency relief commission would stand by through the winter but that almost every locality in the country had reported it could take care of its own indigent and unemployed. The appeal for local relief funds, he said, has met with a response unparalleled since the war.

BUILDING TO CONTINUE

The expenditure of more than $60,000,000 a month by the government on construction projects will go on, as its bit toward employment. Part time work, said the President, is giving aid to millions otherwise without resources.

Upon the reconstruction corporation Mr. Hoover said he depended to give new confidence to agriculture, industry and labor against paralyzing influences and shocks, and also to reopen credit channels which will assure normal working of the commercial fabric. He concluded:

"This program will affect favorably every man, woman and child—not a special class or any group. To re-establish normal functioning is the need of the hour."

Christmas Spirit At Homes of S. A.

The spirit of Santa Claus pervades the various Salvation Army centers these days as Pittsburgh's poor await the coming of Christmas. The settlement, day nursery, hospital and home and the industrial homes are caring for hundreds of persons, young, middle-aged, and old, who are all looking forward to the yuletide. Contributions and donations for the Christmas program are being received at the army headquarters, 425 Boulevard of the Allies.

fered no new argument on the motion for a new trial. He said:

"I don't care to enter into argument. I call attention to the objections made during the course of the trial. It is not necessary to go into them now."

He cited his motion for a change of venue and his motion for exclusion of the entire jury panel selected for the trial, as well as various objections raised during the trial.

Judge Southern replied:

"I gave the rulings careful consideration and have no different ruling to make now than I did then."

The court asked Powers:

"Does the defendant have anything further to say?"

Powers muttered something about "my counsel" which was taken to mean he had left the matter entirely to Law.

LEMKE DEATH

The state charged Powers slew Mrs. Lemke after luring her from her home on the pretext of marriage. He also was indicted for the slayings of Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher, Park Ridge (Ill.) widow, and her three children, but was tried only on the indictment involving Mrs. Lemke. At his trial the state contended he killed his victims "for profit."

Mrs. Lemke's body was uncovered August 28 from a drainage ditch near Powers' garage at Quiet Dell, where he was accused of putting to death his victims. The bodies of Mrs. Eicher and her children had been found the previous day in shallow graves.

THREE RAIDERS HELD IN HOME THEFT CASE

Two Drys, Constable Facing Hearing After Invasion Of McKees Rocks House

Two prohibition agents and a constable were held under $2,000 bail today pending a hearing tonight before Justice of the Peace Margaret Morgan, of Sewickley, following information sworn out by John Wojczechowski, of 235 Olivia street, McKees Rocks, charging his home was robbed after an entry had been forced by the trio armed with warrants.

The information, naming F. J. Kovacs, of Aleppo Township, a "roving" constable, and Prohibition Agents Charles W. Condon and George Fields, charged they forced entry to the house while Mrs. Wojczechowski and others were witnesses Thursday in Criminal Court. It was alleged that after the officers had searched the premises, a diamond and a signet ring, valued at $100 and $97 in cash, were missing.

Warrants were issued by Justice of the Peace Morgan charging forcible entry and larceny after a complaint was made to Chief of County Detectives George W. Murren. The three officers, who did not deny entering the house, said they stole nothing. They admitted they found nothing incriminating in the house.

TWO ARRESTS MADE IN RAIDS

Two persons were arrested after a distillery and two alleged bar-equipped speakeasies were searched by prohibition agents, according to reports to prohibition headquarters today.

Oscar Meiers was arrested when 26 pints of whisky and 30 gallons of beer were seized in Amanda street, agents said. The place had a 10-foot bar, the officers reported.

A. M. Bell was arrested when, according to the agents' report, a 10-foot bar was found in an establishment in South Diamond street. The raiders reported seizing two bottles of whisky and two barrels of beer. The distillery was reported found in a building in Halcomb street, Clairton, according to the agents, who said the place contained a 35-gallon still, 800 gallons of mash and 40 gallons of moonshine.

MELLON, REED SPLIT ON DEBTS

pending ratification of the one-year moratorium. Ratification of the moratorium by Tuesday is considered by Congress leaders to be out of the question.

Reed, high on the finance committee, last night joined Republican Leader Watson, in flat opposition to the Hoover proposal for recreation of the war debt commission.

Reed said he was "sorry" the President recommended reconstituting the war debts commission. He declared:

"I cannot agree with him on that question.

"We have revised our debts once on a basis of capacity to pay and have granted European nations great concessions. Creation of another commission would lead to a downward revision if not cancellation of the debt and I am against that."

Mellon's opening shot to congressional critics who said further debt revision meant cancellation was:

"The administration is opposed to cancellation. No recommendation made carries any such implication."

POINTS TO BRITAIN

The Secretary then pointed to Great Britain, "our best customer," as the outstanding example of why a cut in European debts is necessary. He said:

"With the pound sterling at par, the British treasury needs £32,800,000 in order to pay us $159,500,000. With the pound sterling at the rate at which it sold on December 10, 1931, it would take £48,100,000, or an increase of £15,300,000, or 47 per cent. Or, in other words, the burden on the British taxpayer is increased by almost one-half."

CITY TO RETIRE MANY HORSES

Twenty-nine teams in the Bureau of Highways and Sewers will be abolished next year, if a tentative program outlined by City Council's Budget Committee today is carried to completion.

The horses will be supplanted by motor trucks and changes will be made in the operating personnel, Chairman W. Y. English said. Fifteen trucks will be substituted for the horse-drawn vehicles.

T. Lloyd Pillow, superintendent of the Highways and Sewers Bureau, asked Council for permission to order truck drivers to assist in loading materials on the vehicles as well as drive, if the new setup is adopted. Wages of truck drivers are $4.90 per day, while helpers receive $4.40.

Cuts on the 1932 budget, totaling $11,750, were made by Council's Budget Committee at its meeting yesterday. Of this amount $10,000 was for departmental postage. Under the new setup all letters will be posted from the Controller's office on the meter machine installed there several weeks ago.

PRISON SEETHES AFTER BREAK FATAL TO 3

Bloodhounds Trail Convict Eluding Posses; Inquiry Into Source of Weapons Starts

ner in which pistols, shotguns and ammunition were smuggled in to them. Nor would they disclose other details of the carefully conceived delivery plot which brought death to their three companions, Will Green, Grover C. Durrill and George Curtis.

GREEN RINGLEADER

Evidence emerging from the investigation thus far points to Green, 32, an Oklahoma City mail robber serving 25 years, as the leader and the most desperate of the desperadoes who created a reign of terror throughout the countryside as they fled from the prison trading bullets with pursuing posses.

It was Green who was believed to have shot Warden White when the official made an heroic attempt to wrest a shotgun from the convict's hands. It was Green who dealt out death to his fugitive comrades, Durrill and Curtis, and then destroyed his own life in the besieged farmhouse, according to the theory of Coroner Ted L. Sexton.

After a preliminary examination of the convicts' bodies, the coroner said all three had been killed by .38 caliber pistol bullets. Durrill and Curtis appeared to have been shot at close range. The wounds were in the ears. But the wound that spelled death to Green was just behind the ear, indicating suicide.

Left by his vicious abductors as dead, Warden White, who played the heroic lead in this drama of turmoil and death, was today reported improved at Cushing Hospital, where he was taken by possemen who found him lying beside the road. An emergency operation prevented the amputation of his left arm, physicians said.

SEEK FUGITIVE

Meanwhile, a search was organized for Thayer, the missing convict, who is 64 years old. Reinforced by United States Army troops from Fort Leavenworth, prison guards were searching the cell blocks for trace of the mysteriously vanished prisoner, who was committed to Leavenworth from Oklahoma City along with the three slain convicts. Bloodhounds were yelping and sniffing through the countryside in an effort to pick up his trail. Whether his escape was part of the delivery conspiracy was undetermined.

The death of the three convicts and the serious wounding of the warden were not the only casualties of the pursuit and gun battles which followed the escaping sextet's passage through the prison gates under the shield of Warden White and four convict clerks. Minor bullet wounds were also inflicted on Assistant Deputy Warden James Galvin, Prison Guard I. W. Mooney, one of the captured convicts and one of the possemen. Their injuries, however, were slight.

The prison's normal routine was suspended today, while armed soldiers and guards maintained a strict vigilance. Prisoners were kept in their cells. Work was called off.

At Cushing Hospital nobody was permitted to see or to speak to the wounded warden.

MAIL ROBBERS

The six convicts who engineered the mutiny were all convicted of mail robbery. The three who perished in the farmhouse were serving 25-year terms and had been in the prison six years and eight months. Berta, who was wounded before he and his two companions were captured, was serving 25 years from San Francisco. Brown, convicted in Fargo, N. D., was serving 15 years, while Underwood, convicted in Duluth, Minn., was serving a 25-year term.

The fleeing convicts split into two parties after they had commandeered three automobiles and one of them had shot Warden White, who pleaded for mercy for the occupants of a farmhouse. The prisoners ordered Elizabeth Gates and her brother, Joseph Gates, Jr., 18, to accompany them when the warden spoke up in their behalf. A few minutes later he tried to snatch a shotgun and was shot. The convicts then fled without taking their intended hostages.

Still on Auto, Rum Inside Brings Arrest of Trio

Three men were held by police after they are alleged to have attempted to drive a whisky laden automobile with a still strapped on the running board past a group of Sharpsburg policemen at Eleventh and Penn avenues, Sharpsburg, early today. The driver of the machine police said protested his arrest and led officers to a nearby dwelling where a 150-gallon still and a small quantity of whisky was confiscated.

According to police, Lieut. Rocco Belsito and Patrolmen Tony Domian, Mike Fitcher and Arnal Lavia were standing in Eleventh avenue when an automobile, driven by Biglio Pulambo, 46, of 211 Twelfth avenue, drove past with a portion of a still tied to the running board. He was stopped and 19 five-gallon cans of whisky were found in the machine, the officers declared.

Acting on information from Pulambo, who protested arrest, police raided a vacant dwelling in Wilson way and reported finding a 150-gallon still, five gallons of whisky and 35 barrels of mash.

Two companions of Pulambo, Edward Bougher, 32, and a brother, Patrick Bougher, were also held.

Squire Denies Forced Labor Charge of Ex-Prisoner

The charge that he required a prisoner awaiting a hearing to work on his lawn and automobile, recorded late yesterday in Common Pleas Court, increased the tribulations of Justice of the Peace John G. Metz, of Kennedy Township, accused a few days ago of extortion and conspiracy.

The latest charge is without precedent in this county. It was filed by Walter L. Painter, of Irwin, who averred in a civil suit against others that while he was detained in the Neville Island lockup last June he was required to work one day on the Metz lawn and one day on the Metz automobile.

Metz, asked about the charge today, decared:

"That fellow is a liar. I treated him like a good son. Not wanting to keep him in the lockup, I let him loaf around my place here and even gave him lunch. Another thing, I would not let anyone touch my automobile unless I knew he was an A-1 automobile mechanic."

Painter alleged he was arrested June 8 on an information before Metz charging him with larceny by bailee because of an unpaid bill of $41.30 for apparel bought in a downtown store. He was lodged in the Neville Island jail the four following nights, then discharged without a hearing with a threat, by Metz, of rearrest if the bill were not paid, Painter averred. The charge was withdrawn, he said, after he previously had attempted to return the apparel and the store refused to accept it.

Metz was not made a party to the civil suit, the defendants being Samuel Roth and David J. Bonwit, doing business as the Palace Credit Clothing Company, and William Alberts, company representative, alleged to have made the information.

LOVELORN WOMEN ASK 'AUCTION GIRL'S' AID TO FIND MATES

KANE DROWNING ACQUITTAL FORECAST

Verdict for Professor Seen After His Story on Stand; Love Letters Not Admitted

By DOROTHY DUCAS
International News Service.

HAMPTON, Va., Dec. 12.—Prof. Elisha Kent Kane, III, will be a free man tonight—or completely bowled over by an absolutely unexpected verdict.

As the last day of his trial for the murder of his wife, Jenny, opened, the husky University of Tennessee professor confidently waited for vindication.

Any verdict but "not guilty" will be a terrific surprise to him. He has not the faintest notion of conviction. He never had, but if he needed anything to bolster up his optimism he has received it in the faces of the jurors as he told his own story from the witness stand.

The 12 youngish men who are judging him were impressed with his tale, it was evident. They watched him with round, solemn eyes, leaning forward in their chairs. They asked no questions, they were a perfect audience.

ACQUITTAL FORECAST

Others than the professor believe the decision will be to acquit him.

Not only has the professor told a logical, plausible version of his actions on the beach that day when his wife tumbled off the rocks at Back River Lighthouse, but the commonwealth has failed to bring out any motive for a possible murder. That they hoped to do, of course, with the introduction of the "Betty" letters—the epistles Prof. Kane's alleged sweetheart wrote him talking about their future union.

The court ruled them out as evidence, not only once, but three times, for the prosecuting lawyers doggedly kept bringing them back, hoping to worry the court into changing his ruling.

DEFENSE STRENGTHENED

By a parade of character witnesses who told of extremely happy relations between the Kanes, by a series of medical experts who declared the professor's wife suffered from a heart malady, and by accounts of eyewitnesses on the beach and along the road from the beach to the Dixie Hospital, Hampton, who saw the professor rushing his wife to first aid, the defense was built up.

Unless surprises come from the lips of the prosecution's last rebuttal witnesses this morning, there remains nothing but routine summing up and the charge to the jury by Judge C. Vernon Spratley. It should not take the jury long to bring in its verdict.

The best the prosecution can hope for is that they fail to reach an agreement at all.

Brady Shaffer, 13, of 115 Merritt avenue, Carrick, missing since December 7, when he left home to attend classes in South Hills High School, is being sought throughout the state by police co-operating with the Missing Persons Bureau here, it was said yesterday.

Brady, 13

The boy's parents were unable to explain his disappearance. He was wearing a sheepskin-lined black leather coat, brown sweater, light gray knickers, gray golf socks with a red figure, and black oxfords.

He was last heard of in Portersville, Pa., where it was said he spent Monday night in a hotel after telling the owners he was running away from an orphanage to relatives in Akron, O. When he left Portersville Tuesday he still had his school books in which were written his name and address.

HEIRESS-BRIDE BACKS MATE

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Mrs. Beatrice Barclay Pickerell, 15-year-old bride, remained in hiding today as her father, John C. Barclay, former vice president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, carried on his fight to keep her and her husband, Bevis, 29, apart by prison bars, if necessary.

Pickerell, owner of a small trucking business, is under arrest on two charges made by the father and based on the young couple's elopement last August. Barclay will be the principal witness and will prosecute Pickerell, he said today, "to the full extent of the law."

Mrs. Pickerell, her husband said, is determined to stay away from her parents' home, and will support him in any action he taken to insure their happiness together.

Pickerell, who rejoined his wife in Essex Fells after she left her father's house Monday night, walked into police headquarters today to "make himself available for questioning" about the charges made by Barclay. He and his wife had spent the night in East Orange, he said.

WELFARE AIDES MAKE FINAL APPEAL

Leaders Despair of Raising $736,477 Necessary for Success of Relief Drive

Well, Expert, How Would You Play This Hand?

2 GAS VICTIMS RECOVERING

Mrs. Helen McTighe, 46, and her son, John, 27, found unconscious in their home, 359 McKee place, last night, from gas poisoning, were recovering today.

Returning home from work, Miss Leona McTighe, 25, found her mother prostrate in her second floor bedroom. Her brother, John, summoned by Miss McTighe, fell unconscious on the stairway while attempting to assist his mother.

Miss McTighe called Oakland Police Station and Officers Robert Richmond and Joseph Shaner, with the aid of a crew from the Mine Safety Appliance Company, revived the woman and her son. Both were removed to Magee Hospital.

An obstruction in the flue from the hot air furnace in the home was said by police to have caused gases to radiate through the rooms.

Lenz Boosts Bridge Lead

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(INS.)—With their margin increased 3,055 points by five and one-half hours play last night, Sidney S. Lenz and Oswald Jacoby today led Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson by 5,650 points at the end of the twelfth rubber of their 150-rubber contract bridge match.

At the end of the first hand of the final rubber, Lenz and Jacoby were ahead by 7,030 points, but suffered setbacks during the remaining play.

By MRS. JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON
World's Greatest Woman Bridge Player
(Copyright, 1931, by International News Service.)

The last rubber in last night's session of our match against Mr. Lenz and Mr. Jacoby was one of my most interesting experiences at the bridge table. My husband engaged in a bidding duel with our opponents which resulted in our scoring more than 2,000 in sets. The rubber ended with a plus 600 for us, although technically it was won by our opponents. This is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that our opponents opened the rubber by bidding and making one of their numerous slams.

Both Mr. Lenz and Mr. Jacoby seemed to be extraordinarily excited by the fact that they had raised their net score to 7,030 points as the result of their lay-down slam and began to make rather incautious bids. Apparently Ely detected their state of mind and with a series of adroit feints and counter thrusts, timed beautifully when our opponents were off guard, he scored many a "touch."

GENIUS, ERRORS MIXED

In spite of his brilliant bidding and play on this last rubber, Ely was below his usual standing. He was a top and bottom player. During the evening he made three costly errors. His play might be summarized in the following equation:

Costly errors and genius in spots equals the under-average.

I make bold to criticize my husband because, alas, my errors were even more costly.

For instance, I managed to make a lead out of turn against a slam declaration. Opponents, according to the rules, forced my partner to lead a suit of their own choosing and, as a result, a little slam was made by them which could never have been made had I not been so anxious to show my ace of hearts—the only good card I had.

Against another game contract by opponents I suddenly got frightened right in the middle of the hand and started to swap horses—I mean suits. As a result another beautiful wasted ace was photographed by the press and is now adorning my drawing room.

COSTLY MISTAKES

It is true our errors were few, but they were very costly and too well distributed. The errors of our opponents were quite numerous, but they could easily afford them. They were riding on the crest of the wave, with honors galore. In fact, I believe they were a bit demoralized by their good fortune.

The following hand is an illustration: Dealer North. South vulnerable.

NORTH (Mr. Lenz)

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
2 clubs	Pass	1 N. T.	Pass
Double	Pass	2 hearts	2 hearts
Pass	Double	2 N. T.	Pass
Pass	Pass	Pass	Pass

I consider my pass to Mr. Lenz's no-trump bid better strategy than a bid of either suit. I was lying in wait for more no-trump bidding from our opponents, who were vulnerable and subject therefore to severe penalties if we could set them. When, however, Mr. Jacoby bid two clubs I bid two hearts. Mr. Jacoby's double was for penalties, and Mr. Lenz's take-out was fortunate for us, as we could have been penalized. Instead, opponents lost 600 points.

We also scored a fine result on the eighth hand of this last rubber.

CULBERTSON SLAM BID

We bid and made our first slam on the one hundred forty-first deal. It was significant in a number of ways. It was the first opening forcing bid of two in a suit by either my partner or myself. To reach the only makable slam, in clubs, it was necessary for my husband to give up 150 points for his four aces. The distribution of the hand so clearly indicated a suit declaration, however, that this was no sacrifice at all. A slam could not have been at no-trump, as a study of the hand clearly reveals.

MANY REQUEST NAMES OF MEN WHO REPLY

List of Husband Seekers Reduced When Beechview Entrant Withdraws Offer

There's one less bride on the "auction block" today—but a lot of "chiselers" are seeking, as they say in the rackets, "to be cut in."

Marguerite Lennon, 18, of 1400 Hampshire avenue, Beechview, announced she had withdrawn her offer to marry any "respectable" American man who would pay her parents $10,000.

Mary H. Clowes, ex-waitress of New Eagle, who started all this auction business—perhaps, in view of the modern bridge trend it should be called contract—revealed that she had received dozens of letters from women who want to avoid publicity, but are anxious to find husbands, asking her to give them the names of some of the 365 men who have answered her offer.

Even men are seeking to "crash the gate" on Miss Clowes' idea, she disclosed, exhibiting a letter in which an ambitious male offered to find her a husband with $10,000 if she would pay him a 10 per cent commission.

Miss Lennon made her proposal a week ago today and has received scores of offers, several from men who wrote that they had money in surplus of the requirement and offered reliable references as to their character. Marguerite explained:

"When I did it, I thought it was a good way to carry the family over the depression. So many of my friends — and dozens of people I've never even met—have telephoned me, though, asking me not to do it, that I've decided to give it up.

"I thought perhaps some one would read about my being unable to find a job and give me one. Then I could give up the marrying idea.

"But now my brother-in-law has a job; he got it late the same day I made my offer and my father, of course, is working, so I don't see any use in my going through with it."

Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Lennon, Marguerite's parents, who knew nothing of her plan until they read of it in the newspapers, said they were glad she had changed her mind.

DREAM KILLER'S PLEA ASSAILED

KINGWOOD, W. Va., Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Pale and trembling, Mrs. Evelyn Harader, so-called Clifton Mills "dream slayer," charged with shooting the village postmaster, Cecil Michael, heard Dr. A. G. Defoe, Bruceton physician, shout from the witness stand that he believed her sane.

Dr. Defoe's outburst came in the midst of an extended verbal exchange between attorneys over technicalities. Dr. Defoe previously had testified he could not say whether the defendant was sane; that he suspected she was insincere and feigning. Called in rebuttal for the state, the physician said observation and study of the woman had resulted in his conclusion that she was not insane.

Mrs. Harader buried her face in a handkerchief as she listened to more than a dozen rebuttal witnesses, most of them her neighbors, state for the prosecution that they thought her sane.

The widow of the postmaster, one of the closing witnesses for the prosecution, expressed the same opinion.

Band of 8 Arrested In Auto Looting

J.; Nick Buratti, 21, of Imperial; George Donley, 21, of Youngstown, O.; Joseph Kirk, 22, of 81 Congress street, and Frank Klomser, 18, of 1025 Forbes street.

Bride, Glad Suicide Was Hoax, to Welcome Piazza

Lena, the pretty 17-year-old bride of Philip Piazza, 19, with an engaging smile, said last night she would welcome home her husband when he returns Monday night from California.

Piazza, for whom the Allegheny River was dragged for two days and who was believed dead in a racket war here, was recently located in Mountain View, Cal. He told police there yesterday that he had abandoned his car on the Sixteenth Street Bridge to give the impression that he was a suicide. He said he didn't know why he did it.

First indication that Piazza was safe came from him in a telegram last Monday, his bride's birthday. She is delighted to know he is safe, and is anxiously awaiting his return Monday night.

Missing Opera Singer Left Many Debts; Seek Lawyer

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(INS.)—Still unsolved today was the enigmatic disappearance of Mme. Santa Biondo, Metropolitan Opera soprano, who vanished just before she was to have made her first appearance in a major role on the Metropolitan stage.

Her husband, Salvatore Muzzullo, came here from New Haven, Conn., to aid police in the search.

Tangled financial affairs may have been the motive for Mme. Biondo's sudden disappearance. Detectives learned she owed personal debts of about $30,000, while an attorney now sought was to be questioned about a reported loss of $40,000 of her money through stock market investments.

Friends were unable to explain the notes Mme. Biondo left, in which she said that she had "lived a life of lies" and would seek death "in the waters."

HIGH MASS MARKS SISTERS OF MERCY CENTENARY FETE

BISHOP BOYLE OFFICIATES AS CELEBRANT

Students Depict Founding And Development of Order By Presenting Tableaux

The centenary of the Sisters of Mercy, observed here during the past three days, today included the celebration of pontifical high mass by the Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the Pittsburgh diocese, in St. Agnes' Church, Fifth avenue and Robinson street.

A procession of sisters from the mother house, students of Mt. Mercy College and the Academy of Our Lady of Mercy, nurses and parish school children preceded the mass.

Assisting Bishop Boyle were Msgr. Stephen Walsh, Revs. Michael Hegerich, Jerome D. Hannan and Matthew Yanosek.

At 4 o'clock solemn benediction is scheduled in St. Mary's chapel on the campus.

The anniversary observation will continue tomorrow with a solemn high mass in the Sacred Heart Church, while Monday morning ground will be broken for the new activities building at the school.

The students of the academy yesterday presented a four-scene tableaux showing the highlights of the founding and development of the order. The scenes depicted the founding of the Sisters of Mercy 100 years ago by Mother Catherine McAuley in Ireland; its spread to this and other countries, and the service of the sisters in works of mercy and education.

One of the scenes of the tableaux portrayed the Vicksburg epidemic, when the Mercy sisters attended the sick and played a heroic part in nursing the stricken people.

The performances were given in the nurses' home, Mercy Hospital.

Students who played leading roles in the pageant were Sallie Keener, Estelle Koughan, Mary Gearing, while many others assisted.

The season at popular Pinehurst, N. C., a favorite resort with Pittsburgh folks, has opened for the winter. There are already a number of people there, including the Rev. and Mrs. T. A. Cheatham, who have a winter home, Juniper Villa, there. They have Mrs. Cheatham's mother, Mrs. Samuel S. Faulkner, as their house guest. Mrs. Cheatham was a guest at a recent dinner party at Pinehurst, given by Mrs. O. A. Blackburn, of Pittsburgh, and another Pittsburgh guest was F. E. Now.

N. Y. Industrial Expert Addresses Friday Club

It is the present economic situation that is the new challenge to industry—the challenge that employers make industry not only healthful and safe, but that they also make it secure for the men and women who work in it, Miss Frances Perkins, New York state industrial commissioner, told the Friday Morning Club in Carnegie Music Hall yesterday. Miss Perkins stressed the importance of developing security against old age, illness and unemployment, whether it is done by putting the burden on industry or on the state. One of the things that must be recognized as a demand on industry is the realization of its responsibilities for the people laid off without regard to cause, she stated. Miss Perkins approved of industrial insurance, but said it is neither a panacea for the ills of management nor is it a dole, but that if wisely planned and administered it would be valuable in putting into the hands of wage earners at the beginning of a cyclical depression a certain amount of money to be spent on necessities and so keep alive the wage earner market as a bulwark against further depression.

Youth Desires Peace, Miss Root Tells Club

The youth of the world wants peace, Miss Martha Root, international lecturer for the Bahai movement, told the College Club at luncheon today. Miss Root, who has traveled all over the world in a journey that has lasted nine years, said she has never seen so many signs for peace as now. She believes universal international education will bring about world peace and that an interchange of students between the countries is a decided step towards achieving it. The adoption of some kind of auxiliary language would be another. Miss Root herself has found Esperanto useful and has addressed delegates of Esperanto in 2,000 cities. If there is disarmament, it must be universal, but people must first be disarmed mentally, she says. An education for every child in every country is the solution of the present economic problem, the speaker believes.

Miss Root, who is a former Pittsburgh newspaper woman and a former member of the Women's Press Club, will visit her brother, Clarence C. Root, in Cambridge Springs over Christmas and is sailing for Europe on January 22 to attend the disarmament conference.

Members of the Southern Club at Hotel Schenley in the candle service included in the Moravian Christmas Eve love feast the club celebrated. Mrs. Labberton arranged the program.

Christmastide Traditions Observed

One of the most unique events the Pittsburgh club world has ever known was the Moravian love feast which the Southern Club carried out yesterday at its holiday meeting in the Hotel Schenley. The program began with an account of the service and its symbolism read by Mrs. Walter E. Close. Then followed "Adeste Fideles," sung as a processional by the Senior Girls' Glee Club of Edgewood High School in their maroon and white costumes. During the service the girls sang several carols and two traditional Moravian Christmas airs, Miss Kathryn Carey directing and accompanying them.

There was a violin solo by Gayle Riley and a soprano solo by Anabel Crowell, of the club. The Rev. H. A. Dalzell read from the Scriptures and Mrs. John L. Perry read other historical lines, during which a group of young aides under Mrs. John M. Labberton's direction distributed to every one present lighted candles, hand-made especially for the occasion. These aides, in traditional costume, also served the "feast" of home-made cakes, coffee and buns from large wicker trays, all done in accordance with the old rites.

Miss Janet Spaugh was in charge of the music portion of the impressive service.

The decorations of three Christmas trees and a many-pointed star added to the effectiveness. Around the center tree, which was lighted, the members laid their gifts for the poor.

ASTRAKAN IS WIDELY FAVORED FOR COATS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 12 — In the sartorial primer, "A" stands for astrakan. This fur is definitely part of the winter scene here. Everywhere one sees smart women wearing coats of black cloth, lavishly trimmed with astrakan. It is a wonder that this kind of coat has not become stereotyped since it is so universal. But each designer finds new and original details that distinguish each coat from its fellows, yet managing to maintain the simplicity that should be the hallmark of the black coat for general wear. Although one sees now and again a colored coat, it is the black coat which scores, with brown running in second place. Coats of this type can be worn all day with perfect suitability for almost every occasion or place. Of course, such coats are not cheap, but their adaptability makes them really inexpensive in the long run.

* * *

CHANEL IS A PAST mistress in the art of fashioning the all-black coat and so we are glad to show a sketch of one of her newest and best models. It is in black, dull surfaced cloth, lavishly trimmed with black astrakan. The capelets at each shoulder are attached to a separate pointed piece of cloth at the back, and caught down to the body part of the coat. A similar point, at which terminates the deep shawl collar, is found at the front. Three quarters of the sleeves are of astrakan, there being but a vestige of the materials visible below the capelets. The deep border of astrakan edging the coat runs up into a point at the center front. The silhouette conforms to the slim specifications now universally in order.

MUSIC

Kochanski

Carnegie Music Hall

Program.

Concerto A Minor ..... Bach
Concerto ..... Szymanowski
Intrada ..... Desplanes
Allegretto ..... Boccherini
Serenata, Tarentella .... Pergolesi
Etude ..... Scriabine
Vocalise, en forme de Habanera ..... Ravel
Mazurka ..... Zarzycki

The Art Society presented Paul Kochanski, violinist, in Carnegie Music Hall last night. It was the finest recital so far this season, in fact, the only concert that has hit so high a mark of excellence. The player paid the audience so flattering a compliment that both were in entire rapport, and so playing and applause were most enthusiastic.

Mr. Lissfelt

The program was full of virile and highly dramatic music with contrasting miniatures of utmost delicacy and serenity. Leaving the trite Corellis and Tartinis aside, Kochanski found newer music among the French and the Slavs.

Stravinsky's arrangement of the Pergolesi numbers might have startled and, at the same time, amused that classic Italian; the violinist's own setting of Ravel's Vocalise was as theatrical, though graceful, a tidbit as has come out of modern composition. And the playing of the Szymanowski Concerto was surely the high spot of the recital.

Here is music that does not ignore impassioned melody nor the rhythms of folk dance. There are long wanderings round and about the tonic chord, but we do hear it now and then and are grateful for that anchor. There are strange scales that intrigue the ear and not a dull measure in this work.

But like most contemporary music, this concerto is fragmentary in effect; perhaps the materials are once again not sufficient to express the master's thought, and he has not found the medium of union of the old and the new. It is, however, a marvelous display piece for the violin, and certainly Kochanski was conscious of its vast possibilities.

If there is a more satisfactory violinist before the public, who will name him? As a showman Kochanski has all the tricks at his finger tips; as for variety in tone and style, the most ringing maestoso and the most finely spun pianissimo, he has them all in surplus. He knows his classics but better yet, he is a man of his day and hears the new music while the composer is creating it.

Pierre Luboshutz played supralatively sensitive accompaniments. The encores were a Rigaudon of Francoeur, an air of Couperin, the Brahms popular waltz, and an electrifying performance of De Falla's Fire Dance.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

Mr. Halliday Will Portray John Barrymore's Film Brother

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 12.

To celebrate his new R-K-O contract, John Halliday will play the role of John Barrymore's brother in "State's Attorney."

This picture also will be Helen Twelvetree's initial appearance on the R-K-O lot. Roland Brown borrowed [illegible] from Universal, will direct.

Coming to Hollywood from the stage, John Hall has made an unspectacular but steady advance in popularity with screen audiences. His specialty is the part calling for suavity. You'll recall his excellent performance in Radio's "Consolation Marriage."

HE'S STILL WRONG

Before the complete California record of the U. S. C.-Notre Dame game went into Loew's State here, they gave it a final preview at the M-G-M studio.

At the end of the third quarter, Sam Zimbalist still wanted to bet $-to-1 that Notre Dame would win.

LATEST GOSSIP

One of my scouts reports that Howard Hughes and Loretta Young have been going places together recently.

Ona Munson saw 13 shows in the 10 days she spent in New York. Bidding Hollywood goodbye, Frances Dade is on her way to New York via the canal. She will return to the stage. Ben Lyon flew to San Francisco to see Bebe and the baby. He went by commercial plane. Ben doesn't own a ship any more, but being a reserve lieutenant he can use an Army plane any time he wants to.

Polly Moran's son went in the hospital the other day for appendicitis. Now, her mother has had to go, too. She has influenza.

Eddie Quillan says what Hollywood needs is somebody to figure out a way to cut golf scores instead of salaries.

PUTTING HIM STRAIGHT

When Edward G. Robinson was playing New York on his recent personal appearance tour he usually had a group of people waiting to see him leave the theater.

One day as he was making up, a slim youngster slipped into his dressing room. Furtively the kid displayed a small automatic.

"You'd better hire me for a bodyguard," he said. "One of those people waiting out there might try to bump you off. I'm sick of school, anyway," he added, "and I want to travel."

Robinson left off his making up and started to talk. Before he was through the kid had promised to go back to school and never to carry a gun again.

Ideas Clash In Davis Film

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

The Age for Love" is the picture in both the Davis and the Enright. It is a clash between Main Street and modernism. It is more of a mental case than it is a motion picture.

Billie Dove is the star. She goes literary and emotional. She has a time of it deciding which she wants most, love or a career. She does try having both. But she finds she can't have the cake and eat it, too.

It's not a very original idea is it?

Charles Starrett appears as a Main Streetish hero. He's old-fashioned enough to want a stay-at-home wife and babies. He's just a big grownup boy. He sulks, he drinks, he gets a divorce and then marries again—this time an old-fashioned girl.

Here the picture develops a subtle complex. Mr. Starrett isn't happy with his new wife, and his ex-wife isn't happy with her old job—that of literary agent. Eventually, though, there's a happy reunion in gay Paree.

Edward Everett Horton furnishes the most lively episodes in the film, even though he spends most of his time dozing on a couch.

And a new face in the cast arouses interest. It is that of Chester Morris' younger brother, Adrian. He is a husky fellow, with his brother's eye-brows. He plays a suburban husband.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

Variation of an Old Theme.

MARY had a little lamb. Aside from a nice figure and a pretty face, that lamb was her only possession. She lived on a farm with her pa and her ma. They weren't very lavish with their daughter because they didn't believe in spending money on anything that wasn't necessary. More than that, they were strict with the gal. So, no matter how you looked at it, Mary's only real friend was that little lamb.

Although nobody knew it but herself, Mary was developing a yen for Broadway. She was reading the Broadway columns and, when she could dig up the money, she bought herself a Variety. Then, with the lamb for company, she would wander into the fields and read for hour after hour.

One morning she made up her mind. She was getting nowhere on the farm; she could hope to get nowhere. Broadway was calling her. The yen had become a necessity. She packed that cheap little grip and sneaked off before the noon meal. She didn't bother to say goodby to ma and pa. It wouldn't have meant anything anyhow.

At the station Mary bought herself a ticket to the big town. That left her with but a dollar in her purse, but she was happy. At last her hour was at hand. A nice train ride—and then Broadway.

Mary had a little happiness . . .

* * *

Mary stood in front of a restaurant and gazed hungrily at the sight within. She saw juicy hams and delicious roast beef. She saw men and women eating to their hearts' content. She felt the tears rushing to her eyes.

A man stepped up to her. A good-looking man with blue eyes.

"What's the matter, little girl?" she heard him say. "Are you hungry?"

Mary should have turned away. She knew that. But the pangs were mightier than the warnings. So she nodded.

"Yes," she replied. "I'm very hungry."

The man took her arm.

"Come inside with me," said the man. "There's no reason in the world why such a pretty little girl should be hungry."

Mary had a little meal . . .

* * *

The man said he was in the show business. A producer, no less. He told her that he was even then casting a new production and that if Mary cared to do so he would be glad to give her a small part. Mary was very happy. She told the kind man that this was her great ambition.

The following day she met the man again. The third day she met him again. This time he took her tiny hand in his and gazed into her eyes.

"You're very beautiful," he murmured softly. "I am growing very, very fond of you. Do you like me?"

Mary shook her head.

"Very much," she returned. "I like you because you're going to put me on the stage. When do we start rehearsals?"

"Soon," said the man. "Very soon. But meanwhile I want to talk to you about something else."

A week later Mary had a little apartment . . .

* * *

Mary couldn't understand the big delay in making her a star. The man had promised that he would give her the big part at any moment. But the weeks went by and the part failed to arrive.

She spoke to him about it very often.

"When am I to have my part?" she queried. "You said you were starting rehearsals when I first met you. What are you waiting for?"

The man was a trifle evasive. "Conditions are bad right now," he asserted. "I am holding back a little while. Don't worry, honey. I haven't forgotten about it. You'll be a star yet."

But Mary was growing persistent.

"Why is it that I haven't seen your office yet?" she asked. "And why is it that I never see your name mentioned in any of the papers?"

The man shrugged his shoulders.

"I don't go in for that sort of stuff," he chirped. "That's just cheap publicity. Now, I want you to be a good girl and stop asking so many questions. Here's a little something I bought for you. Isn't it beautiful?"

Mary had a diamond ring . . .

* * *

Mary sat in her apartment one morning and gazed out of the window. She wished the man would hurry with that part because time was hanging heavy on her hands. The bell rang. And when she opened the door, a burly gentleman walked in.

"I'm McNab, of headquarters," he announced. "Where's your man?"

"He's not here," returned Mary. "Are you going to help him produce his show?"

"No," muttered the detective. "But I'm going to help produce him at headquarters. Where'd you get that ring?"

"He gave it to me," said Mary. "Isn't it pretty?"

"Beautiful," responded the detective. "But there's a patrol wagon in front of the building that's even nicer. Come along with me."

Mary had a little ride . . .

* * *

In due time Mary sat in a crowded courtroom and heard everything that was going on. Terrible things were happening. The man was accused of stealing a number of articles. When they put her on the stand, Mary was very angry.

"He's the very nicest man in the world," she cried, "and you have no right to say anything mean about him. He's really a producer of big plays and he has so much on his mind. You just leave him alone."

But the judge must have been a very unkind man because he wouldn't listen to Mary at all. Mary's ring was taken, her apartment was ordered seized—and the man was given 10 years in jail.

Just before they led the man away, Mary rushed up to him. She threw her arms around his neck.

"I love you," she cried brokenly. "How can they take you away from me like this? What's going to become of the part you had for me? How am I going to succeed as an actress?"

"Go away," said the man. "You annoy me."

Mary wouldn't listen.

"But I love you," she insisted. "I love you very much. And do you know what I'm going to do? Guess what I'm going to do?"

"I don't know," said the man, "and what's more, I don't care."

Mary smiled a lovely smile.

"Oh, yes, you do," she cried, "you just won't give in. I'll tell you what I'm going to do. I'm going to wait for you. And when you come out we'll be married."

The man pushed Mary away.

"That's fine," he grunted. "But what is my wife going to say about it? . . .

BabyGotGary 'His Woman' In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

With Gary Cooper and Claudette Colbert in the leading roles, and "His Woman" as the title of the film, it is hardly necessary to ask what happens. Gary gets "his woman," of course, though there have to be so and so many reels of assorted trouble, during which Claudette has to play nurse and save a baby from pneumonia to make sure that Gary gets her at last.

George Seibel

You see, Claudette wasn't just what she ought to have been in order to qualify as "His Woman." Gary is captain of a coastwise ship and he has his baby aboard, and baby needs a nurse. Claudette gets the job, and is such a good nurse that baby won't take his bottle from anybody else, not even from Gary.

But Claudette was once an entertainer at a joint called "Marie's"—and that starts the trouble.

FIGHT IN THE FOG

The first mate makes advances to Claudette, and Gary has to knock him overboard during a fight in the fog. When they land in Brooklyn, Gary has to answer for attempted murder, because the man knocked overboard has been picked up by a passing liner.

When Gary finds out what Claudette really is—or was—he orders her off his ship, and proceeds to get gloriously drunk. As for Baby Richard, he at once proceeds to crawl out into the rain and get pneumonia.

Claudette has to come back, save Baby Richard from death and then Gary realizes that after all she is "His Woman."

SAFETY-PIN COMEDY

It is an average specimen of the safety-pin comedy, with nursing bottles to enhance the sentimental interest. Little Richard coos and gurgles beautifully, and certainly deserves a nice foster-mother like Claudette. But the whole story is a bit foggy, and we believe they smeared something bitter and nasty on that nursing bottle to get Richard to push it away.

There is also a Hal Roach comic called "War Mammas." Zasu Pitts is always funny—the rest of it is rather foolish. The Sport-light feature exhibits some beautiful dogs, and the Hearst Globe Trotter shows maneuvers of the Japanese army, snow plows in action, ski-runners at St. Moritz and a delicious fashion show for Parisian dogs.

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: The Gridiron Club of Washington, perhaps the most exclusive club of its sort in the world, is readying its annual affair . . . This is the event to which the President, his Cabinet, and other distinguished people are invited by the newspapermen . . . It is when the scribes tell the President and his gang just what they think of him and them . . . It is done via a revue with sketches, some of which are devastatingly cruel and vitriolic . . . Mr. Hoover, however, is permitted to tell them all just what he thinks of them, too . . . It is the one time the Nation's Head Man acts his age, relaxes and lets his hair down . . . Well, no witness to these proceedings has ever revealed what happened at these affairs, but you can tell Mr. and Mrs. Public (who rate a chuckle or titter after all they've been through) what is going to happen! . . . The Naval conference, Hoover's prize pet and prize flop, will be the big tease . . . The show is designed after G&S's "H. M. S. Pinafore" and Mr. Hoover's face will get terribly pink . . . He ought to thank you for tipping him off in advance, which should give enough time to his ghost writers to think up a comical answer . . . Don't ask who told me.

Where can we reach Dustin Farnum's widow? . . . After reading the "Portrait" of her, the management of the Brook Hotel wants to give her a comfortable and cheery room, rent free . . . nice? . . . Thank Charlie Hughes of the DAC and Burton Rascoe . . . Harry Salpeter has been assigned by V. F. to do a piece . . . The detective that raided that nude cult is appropriately named Bloomer . . . That famously known book store is in the receiver's paws, as you reported so often it would be . . . One T. L. phoned . . . Said he's surprised at you for saying what you said about George Lowther's betrothals—that his real gal is Charlotte Milburn . . . The same voice argues that you wrote that Chisholm Beach was that way about Adele Morel, when you didn't say anything of the sort. You said they were in the cold cream business together and that his mammy was furious . . . You have so much material in the second drawer it will go stale on you unless you use it someplace right away.

Your December Police Pass is in the 2nd drawer—leave your old one for Elkins . . . Heard Mildred Bailey for the first time last night—she's grand . . . A pal of yours living at a 54th street hotel had a party the other night and a jealous girl friend threw his costly bridge-work into the street where it was found after an all night search broken! . . . Fred Stone has changed his mind about clean material and in his new show, with his daughters, he goes in for some pretty shady gags . . . Pretty sad, what? . . . After all these years of trying to combat the Minsky competition the leader of the Clean Stage succumbs . . . I hear from those who covered the show in the suburbs that the mixture doesn't jell . . . It seems so out of order to see Stone and his children in a show employing smoking-car fables . . . Well, one must live, huh? . . . Even a Fred Stone!

Lilyan Tashman and Adrienne Morrison had a verbal bout . . . The Bennett gal's mammy had hi-hatted Tashman, the story goes . . . And Tashman's comeback is too terrible for a lady (ahem) like me to tell an alleged gentleman like you . . . Sylvia Sydney is absolutely the queen of the Paramount lot . . . Dorothy Arnzer is having censor trouble with the "Working Girls" flicker . . . Seems funny that Jimmy had to go all the way to California to get the Bronx Cheer . . . Marlene Dietrich is cordially disliked for ritzing studio subordinates . . . The Von Sternberg influence, you know . . . Those kids of Lya de Putti's are twin girls and now are 14 . . . Mrs. Felix Young and Mrs. Harry Cohn, both of the flicker business in H'wood, aren't so chummy since the former overheard the latter in a H'wood beauty parlor . . . Well, all right then, tell me . . . Why did the Nat'l Board of Review interrupt that Dorothy Hall-Buddy Rogers kiss?

Frank Gilmore, of Equity, wants to know how you know he is opposed to Sunday shows—and he argues that it's been 20 yrs. since he's had enough money to play golf on the Sabbath . . . He says it is up to the membership whether or not Equity should favor Sunday performances . . . Remember E. V. Durling, who used to be on the Globe here? . . . He now is a columnist in Los Angeles and he paragraphs: "About 8 yrs. ago I praised the poem of an anonymous writer in The Vaudeville News and shortly after I received a note of thanxs signed W. Winchell" . . . Eight yrs. ago—gee, almost 88, huh? . . . Izzy phoned . . . Said he read about this nude cult being raided in the B'way sector. With all the burlesk and night club shows Izzy wonders how the cops could tell which was the Cult? . . . Dorothy Knapp's grandma passed on. Dot said to tell you and invite you to the funeral—I told her you were working all night now and going to sleep wherever you were at the exact moment you felt seepy-by-by. . . . I sent your condolences, of course.

Capt. Frank Hawks, who is an Honorary Chief of the freezing and destitute Sioux Indians, is trying to collect old clothes for them . . . Frank urges you to mention it and to ask readers to send the old clothes to him care of the Texas Co., at 135 E. 42nd St. . . goombye, pleeze!—R. C.

War Scenes In Metro News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Pictures from the great Japanese Army training area, near Tokio, show the elaborate preparations being made by the Japanese government for the war in Manchuria. Living up to the centuries old tradition that Emperors of Japan are no figureheads, Hirohito is seen personally directing the mobilization of his armies. Mounted on a great white charger he reviews thousands of troops in all branches of the service. There is a graphic description of the preparations by the Globe Trotter.

Pictures from the west and northwest show countryside, railroads, towns and villages in the grip of a terrific blizzard. Great drifts have choked the roads and the struggle against the fury of the storm is shown in vivid detail. Huge engine plows and other snow removing machines battle against the great drifts.

WRESTLERS AND JUMPERS

Most wrestling matches are funny, but the bout staged at Madison Square Garden, New York, between Dusek and Gardini is a regular hippodrome. Fists are as frequently employed as holds, and flying tackles that land nowhere and comedy falls abound in this ridiculous contest.

Famous ski jumpers from all over the world open the season at St. Moritz in Switzerland. There are many bad spills. As a surprise finish to the subject the scene shifts to Paris where Bobby Hartnett, a French champion, is seen skiing on a dry pavement with the assistance of an automobile.

With the football season over Hearst Metrotone News presents a resume of the most sensational plays of the year. This includes high spots in the big "upset" games such as the defeat of Southern California by St. Mary's, Notre Dame by the Trojans and the invasion of the Georgia team which spelled disaster to Yale and N. Y. U.

DOG MANNEQUINS

Now they have dog mannequins in Paris. Before a delighted audience of feminine owners of dogs the animals are paraded around garbed in the latest creations of coats, chest protecters and nightgowns.

Wierd scenes from Rhodesia, South Africa, show for the first time an actual war dance by the Zimbabwe warriors. These half-naked savages stage their dance in the shadow of the ruins of King Solomon's mines.

Court Needed Sometimes to Make Hubby Do Right

He's a great guy around the speakeasies—hail-fellow-well-met, cheerful spender an' all that. In fact, he couldn't think of letting anyone else pay a bill!

But when it comes to buying the baby shoes, or groceries, or a new hat for the little woman—

Well, isn't there a depression on? So how can they be so selfish as to want things like that, when paying for them would cramp his style with The Boys?

So that's why Mona's moaning.

"Dear Sally Martin:

"Here is a new slant on the Depression and I hope you can tell me what to do about it. I'll confess I'm stumped.

"I used to think that 'charity began at home' but now I am finding that the depression seems to begin there.

"My husband howls till the heavens fairly fall down about how bad business is and hard times are for him. He just can't see his way clear to give us even the barest necessities—not even decent warm winter underwear for our boy, or sufficient money to run the house or to buy me a few fairly decent clothes.

"But he has plenty of money to entertain The Boys in speakeasies and other such places. You'd think he was a millionaire, the way he flashes his money around there. No one else can pay a bill when he is around.

"On the other hand, the minute he opens the door at home he starts singing the blues and talking about what a hard time he is having and if I say anything he tells me that if I don't like it I can get out.

HE DOESN'T CARE

"I don't know where he thinks I would go or what I would do if I did. But that doesn't seem to worry him at all. He seems to think of no one but himself.

"You'd think he'd want to take decent care of his own son but no; all he seems to think of is 'showing off' before some bunch of bums in a speak somewhere.

I don't think he is a white man at all. Do you? I'm just sick of it all.

What do you say? What shall I do?

Mona

What do I say, Mona?

I say you're right when you think he isn't fit to call himself a man. He's just a selfish, egotistical four-flusher.

CASE FOR COURT

No doubt he thinks he's registering as big and liberal and important when he pays a few bills for mooching gin swiggers, but if the truth were known they despise him for a fool, even while they're taking advantage of his stupid desire to show off, just as any decent man who knew of his criminal stinginess and his whining to his family would despise him.

And what'll you do about it?

Well, you alone can't do a great deal, but there are people who can. We have Domestic Relations Courts to deal with his brand of "depression," and I'd advise you not to waste any time seeing that they do it.

Go straight to the judge of your Domestic Relations Court and tell your story, and have the money you need to run your home and take care of that boy of yours. He'll also make it plenty lively for your husband if he doesn't live up to his obligations.

And that goes, too, for all the other women who have husbands of the same stripe.

FATHER CHRISTMAS

His mail is just as heavy as ever.

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Remember—Father Christmas finds no difference in his mail-sacks this year—just because America—who isn't used at all to the feeling—finds herself all in all in a muddled state of pocket-book, you must not suppose that old Mr. Santa Holly Plum-Pudding Claus has a mail sack that is thin also. The letters are just as thick as ever—and just as wishful. Little boys do not dream less of toys and apples and nuts and turkeys just because the adult purse is embarrassed. Nor little girls of tea-sets and picture-books and dolls and the star on the Christmas-tree, because the Nations are worried. So, just as nearly as you can, help him to keep the toy and gift shop working—and to answer his mail with "shoes and shirts and pies and toys," the wearables, the eatables, and the frivolous Christmas Cheer.

Father Christmas, they say, was lost one time, and a "wanted" bill was out for him all over the world. They longed for his return. They described him—the jolly old, lost old man. He never really was that I know of. But this year has been such an out-of-the-way one that perhaps we'd better think it is possible for Father Christmas to BE LOST this strange year, and make it our affair to see that he isn't.

For if you help him out he can see that every little boy and his mother and father can sing Will Shakespeare's "Holly Song."

"Then Heigh Ho, the Holly,
This Life is Most Jolly!"

—NELL BRINKLEY.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Transfusions of Blood Bring Amazing Results

For one reason or another a blood transfusion may be required. As the result of a severe hemorrhage, due to accidental injury or operation, it may be necessary, while in certain anaemic conditions there may be little hope of recovery without it.

Dr. Copeland

When this occurs, the blood of a healthy, normal person is pumped into the blood vessels of the afflicted one. The borrowed blood replaces or otherwise improves the blood and health of the patient.

It is amazing to watch the miraculous change which sometimes follows a transfusion. The patient, pale and markedly anaemic-looking, may have little or no color in the lips and skin. He returns from the operating room with color and renewed life.

In extreme emergencies a parent, brother or sister gives blood to the weak one. Usually it is supplied by a professional blood donor. It is remarkable what a tremendous number of persons are willing to give blood for this purpose.

The practice of transfusion is an old one, but only within recent years has it become a definite feature in medical practice. Within the last year or two, particularly since the beginning of the present unemployment situation, there has been an increasing number of persons offering to sell their blood.

As a result of a very careful study conducted by a selected committee of doctors in New York state, regulations and rules have been established for the control of blood donors. This method of guarding the public is characteristic of modern advances in public health and medicine.

By "blood donor," according to the law, is meant "any person who holds himself as willing to dispose of his blood, or who offers his blood, or whose blood is used for transfusion purposes for a fee."

In New York, it is now impossible for any person to act as a regular donor without a certificate of registration from the Department of Health. Before obtaining this certificate, the applicant must give satisfactory evidence of perfect health. One who is under weight, or who shows any signs of disease, or has had any infectious blood disease, is not permitted to give blood.

Repeated blood tests, as well as repeated physical examinations, are required of all licensed donors. This makes certain that only the most perfect shall supply blood. It reduces to the minimum the danger to the patient who must submit to a blood transfusion.

It is hoped that other states will follow this excellent example. It is for the best interests of the patient and the public in general that careful, systematic supervision be made of all blood donors.

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

Madge Takes Up Task of Completing Drama

There was but one person in the living room who showed any reluctance in obeying Katie's imperative call to dinner. The lure of the "bootle feeshes climbing out of the pan waiting to be swallowed," so appealed to the hunger of the fishing party, and indeed to the rest of us, that there was a quick exodus into the dining room. Only Bill, not yet Seventeen, but giving a realistic imitation of the role, was blissfully unconscious of Katie's ire at having the phonograph started just as she was ringing her second dinner gong, and with his arms in exactly the correct posture about Marion, but with eyes looking unutterable adoration into hers, he gave no sign of having heard any summons, until she, tactful and resourceful, pretended to stumble, and caught at his arm. I was so near them that I caught all of the little colloquy.

"Did you hurt yourself?" Bill asked so anxiously that, sympathize though I might with his roseate young dream, I had hard work to choke back a laugh. It was the agonized tone which one would use to a beloved old mother who had just fallen down a flight of stairs.

"No, it's only this hockey ankle of mine," Marion replied, with, I knew just enough truth back of her words to save her from flagrant subterfuge. "I twisted it pretty badly last year, and the darned thing goes back on me every now and then."

"You must sit down at once," he said masterfully, then as the possible consequences of the thing dawned on him, he gasped —"Won't you be able to dance any more this evening?"

"Of course I will, Stupid!" Her eyes made the appellation a sort of accolade, and Bill sniffed the air as might a warhorse. "It will be all right after a rest, and we really ought to eat dinner now, don't you think? Aren't you hungry?"

"Am I?" Relieved at one stroke of two great anxieties, he became all normal boy once more, and escorting Marion into the dining room with the care of one tending an invalid on crutches, he proved himself almost as "valiant a trencherman" as his brother Hank who easily would have carried off any prize offered for the largest number of fish eaten during the meal.

I found, however, when I had settled myself in my place at the dinner table, that I was too excited to eat. I did not need Lillian's admonition to eat lightly for fear I would be stodgy in the night's work we had before us. I had my work cut out for me to get enough food down so that my father and Dicky should not remark upon my lack of appetite, and concern themselves with my plans for the evening.

I saw Lillian's shrewd eyes upon me during the first courses of the dinner. Then she turned her attention to Dicky and my father and so skillfully inveigled them into an argument, and kept them talking, that they had no chance to think of anything else save their controversy with her.

And then at last the dinner was over, the little boys tucked into bed, my mother-in-law [illegible] which my father chivalrously gives her almost every evening, Harry and Dicky smoking on the front veranda, and the three Harrisons and Marion dancing in the living room. As Lillian, Katherine and I went quietly upstairs, I had the feeling of a conspirator whose path suddenly has been made easy for him.

"We'll go in my room," Lillian decided briskly. "There's more room in there, and my big drawing table will be just the thing to set that theater of Phil's on. Where is it, Madge?"

"In the storeroom," Katherine answered for me. "I put it away there a few days before Madge went to the hospital. Want it?"

Lillian nodded and Katherine went out of the room, returning in a few minutes with the bulky, but lightweight miniature theater which Philip Verizen had given me upon the last Christmas. It was a structure, cunningly contrived, completely and exquisitely appointed, from the real curtain which could be raised and lowered to the tiny, painted doll-like figures, two dozen of them, which could be stood erect or put in various postures as the exigencies of the dramas written around them demanded. Real scenic backgrounds and wings, and complete sets of costumes of several periods, modern and old, for the doll actors, made it possible fully to visualize whatever scene one was writing.

Lillian's eyes were snapping with excitement as Katherine set down the theater upon her cleared drawing table, and I envied her the youthful exuberant enthusiasm which is hers over anything unusual, and upon which she is always able to draw when confronted by an emergency.

"The actors don't change their costumes between the first and second acts, do they, Madge?" she asked, drawing the curtain of the theater.

"No," I answered, finding difficulty in articulating even that syllable. I had the helpless trapped feeling which one experiences when looked to for a task seemingly impossible of accomplishment.

She did not look at me but at Katherine, who turned to the door again, and I was certain that some signal passed between them.

"The dolls are packed away in a box," Katherine said, "but they are not dressed. I'll be back with them in a minute."

But when 10 minutes had gone with no sign of her, I spoke tremulously to Lillian.

"What do you suppose can be keeping Katherine?" I asked.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Choosing Wedding Attendants

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister claims that the best man and ushers attending a wedding must be single men, and I am of the opinion that it would be perfectly all right for them to be married. Please advise which is correct?

B. P.

You are right. When the bride and groom choose their attendants they should choose them because they are close friends and because they wish to have them attend them at their wedding . . . It makes no difference whether or not they are married. And the wife of a man who is asked by the groom to be an attendant should not feel that she should be asked by the bride to be an attendant; and the husband of a woman who is asked by the bride to be an attendant should not expect to be asked by the groom to be the best man or an usher.

Engraving on Christmas Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it good form to use one's visiting card plate on a Christmas card on which the message is already engraved? H. T. P.

Yes, if the style of engraving used for the message is exactly the same as the style of engraving used for your name on the plate.

But I have all kinds of doubts about this, for usually the result is not a very satisfactory one. The card usually lacks harmony, giving the appearance of a hodge-podge of types. And so often, so often, the name, even if it is of the same style of engraving, is applied not straight. Too, as you can easily understand, the message on the card looks very newly engraved, and the name, since the plate may have been often used for impressions for your cards, will be lightly engraved on the card.

When we buy cards with the message already engraved on them, it is really in vastly better form to continue this selection of informality by writing our name on the card.

STOP THAT COLD

DISTRESSING cold in chest or throat—that so often leads to something serious—generally responds to good old Musterole with the first application. Should be more effective if used once every hour for five hours.

This famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other helpful ingredients brings relief naturally. Musterole gets action because it is a scientific "counter-irritant"—not just a salve—it penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by doctors and nurses.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

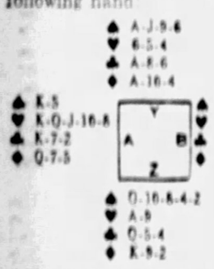
OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Showing the Double Game Expectations

An unnecessarily high response to an informatory double shows game expectations, as illustrated by procedure on the following hand:



Z passed. A opened with a bid of 1 heart, which Y doubled to force his partner's response. B passed. An informatory double of one of a major suit normally shows five assisting tricks for partner; Z's hand counted five probable tricks at spades (the ace of hearts counting as only one trick, because the suit had been bid adversely), promising game in case Y was strong in spades. If Z responded with only 1 spade, having passed previously, Y might not support a minimum response, but Z's bid of 2 spades would be supported if possible, even if Y held no values more than shown by his double. Z bid 2 spades, which Y carried to game.

Often it is difficult to fulfill a game contract when a hand has been bid to its limit. Z won the opening lead [illegible] ace. It was evident that A held both the missing king of spades and club, to give him opening bid values, probably he also held at least one honor in diamonds. A must be forced to lead either clubs or diamonds for Z to go game.

First Z took two leads of trumps, picking up A's king; then A was put in the lead with a losing heart, hoping that he would open another suit, but he led back a heart, obliging Z to trump. It might seem as if Z had only to lay down his two top diamonds, and throw A in with his queen on the third round, but an old stager would not be caught that way; he would duck his queen under the ace or king, forcing Z to put B in the lead, which would have given A-B club tricks and saved game.

Z had to win a club trick with Y's ace, then lead a small club towards his own queen, putting up his queen and losing two club tricks, but that ended his troubles. If the adversaries led either a heart or club, one of declarer's hands could trump the lead while the other hand would obtain a discard of its only possible losing diamond. B had won the third round of clubs, he had to lead a low diamond. Z followed with his lowest diamond and A had either to lose the trick to dummy's 10 or put up his queen; he did the latter; Y won the trick with his ace, and led back his 10. It made no difference what B did, because Z must win the balance of the tricks, and game.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

The hair is grateful for regular attention. Before going to bed the supplicant for ambrosial locks should give her scalp a five-minute massage, then rumple the hair so it stands on end and enjoys an air bath. This hygienic measure is particularly helpful when the scalp is inclined to perspire and dandruff collects.

Why some auburn-haired girls insist upon wearing brown nobody knows. It is not their best color, by any means. A red head with fair skin wears black splendidly. Green-blues are a good bet for her. She should select ivory or beige in preference to dead white, though that rule holds good with girls of almost all colorings. Mauve, yellow, lavender and plum are friendly to auburn hair.

To impart a suggestion of auburn brightness to brown hair, use a henna rinse. Steep three tablespoonfuls of henna leaves in a quart of water, cool, strain, pour over the head after the shampoo. The henna pack is a stronger coloring agent. It is made by mixing powdered Egyptian henna with boiling water to form a paste, spreading quickly over the hair with a brush, letting it remain on from five to 10 minutes, then shampooing.

The blotchy skin is usually due to internal causes, a digestion that must wrestle with food that is too rich for the stomach's well-being. Delete pastries for a time, substituting fresh or cooked fruit and fruit juices. Drink six glasses of [illegible] a day. Cut out condiments and fat meats. A balanced diet consists of eggs, cereals, lean meats, fish, fowl, green salads, vegetables. Tomato juice is recommended for piping down a complexion that flushes easily.

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets help arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, people rarely suffer from indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Try Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All druggists, 15c, 25c and 50c.

W. H. Grine, of 2121 Broadway, Beechview, is all flustered . . . listening to the radio selection of an All-America team on the Trumpeteers' program the other night, he was thrilled to hear the announcer name exactly the same team he submitted, but he was not included among the prize winners . . . sponsors of the program have promised a re-check of his entry.

Question a Day:

Is Paul Dumont of "Mr. Bones and Company" the man by the same name who announced for WAHG years ago? And how old is he?—Mrs. Verne S., Baum boulevard.

Answer—The same man. The grandfather's clock in his home had just got through striking the first six "bongs" of midnight's 12 when Paul came into the world in the year 1888. On one side was December 2 and on the other December 3, and the entire family jumped to arms over which date should be officially set down as his birthday. December 3, 1888, won, since the clock was more than half way through striking.

Substitution of a talk by Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt threw the Theater of the Air a little off balance for about 10 minutes last night . . . it was a surprise order for everybody, including WCAE operators . . .

Two hoaxes in one week . . . a highly imaginative yarn about a soap manufacturer canvassing from door to door to determine the most popular local station, denied by every soap manufacturer's representative in the city . . . and now, a story about NBC protesting the use of the name "Revelers" by a local quartet . . . denied by KDKA and unheard of at NBC . . . all of which follows another hoax of a few Sundays ago to the effect that "Moonshine and Honeysuckle"—with continuities ahead into February—plan a trip "soon" into Pittsburgh . . . ho hum! Pittsburgh has its own Hans Christian Anderson . . .

Thomas Stearns Eliot, American-born poet who has made his home in England, is to speak on the "Life of John Dryden" over CBS-WJAS in the International Broadcast tomorrow afternoon at 12:30. . .

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—If it isn't Walter Damrosch who is now shelling the operatic fortresses. Unassisted, too. All in behalf of opera in English.

Listen to Gen. Damrosch: "I am determined to continue the fight, if fight it is, until both the Metropolitan and Chicago opera houses accept the English language for the performance of all their operas" . . . It looks like a long fight, for the opera fortresses are cemented with tradition. And it's so hard to demolish tradition . . . Damrosch has started something, anyway. But he will need help, and plenty of it, from the so-called best people . . . Or are there any best people any more?

Vaudeville could get back on its feet with a whoopla, it seems to us, if it would book radio stars for tours, or build up its own headliners through successive radio appearances and then route them in its houses . . . The broadcasting bureaus are showing the way. The latter send out their Lombardos, their Phillips Lords, and with them restore the almost-forgotten click of the box office cash drawer.

* * *

Statisticians, who specialize in New Year's Eve whoopee, report that the business of celebrating the next new year will be, on the average, 83 cheaper than last year, or 87, as compared with $10 . . . Restaurant men know they have radio to buck, and radio on that particular night will bring in every dance band this side of Valhalla . . . The Army-Navy game will attract a good armchair audience today, but nothing to what Tulane and Southern California will draw when they meet under the Pasadena sun on New Year's Day . . . And it will not be solely because a holiday makes loudspeakers more accessible, but because listeners will wish to satisfy their curiosity about Tulane. Tulane, like most Southern colleges, plays football with camp-meeting fervor . . .

Come to think about it, a Southern camp-meeting would be a novelty on the air. . . Paul Whiteman has written a march about Chicago. It shouldn't be hard to write such a march. Why of course, of course, plenty of emphasis on the rat-a-tat-tat of the snare drum and the boom-boom of the bass.

* * *

Let one network snare a new singer, proceed to popularize him, and quicker than you can say "Bing Columbo" the rival chain counters with another singer of the same style . . . Right now network sideshows offer as rivals Arthur Jarrett and Jack Whiting. Jarrett has had more radio experience, Whiting more stage. Whiting—he is now the husband of the mother of young Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—will be recalled as the first vocalizer of those zippy tunes, "You're the Cream in My Coffee" and "I've Got Five Dollars."

STOCK MARKET DIPS IN EARLY TRADING

Rails Generally Steady, While Utilities, Steels And Tobaccos Decline

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Stocks sagged in active early trading today. Rails were generally steady, but utilities, steels and tobaccos drooped.

American Telephone, Electric Power and Light, Consolidated Gas and North American lost a point. United States Steel dipped more than 1 to a new low while the preferred dropped 2. Tobacco shares yielded a point or so. Atchison's loss of more than 2 was an exception in the rail group.

President Hoover's appeal for support on his 12-point program for economic reconstruction and Secretary Mellon's statement on the war debts were prominent features of the overnight news. There were also further reports that Congress intended to investigate short selling.

Bank clearings this week represented a drop of some 33 per cent from a year ago and commodity indices showed a preponderance of lower prices. Market commentators seem more impressed by the decline in bonds than by the weakness of stocks although some are beginning to look for a technical rally by the latter.

Over-subscription of the December 15 offering of treasury obligations by a margin of about 37 per cent was considered satisfactory in banking circles. It emphasizes the demand for highest grade short term securities and also the desire of large investors to maintain liquid positions.

Sterling cables jumped 6 cents at the opening to $3.39.

GLASS DEMAND SLOWS UP

For the flat glass industry at least, a period of watchful but hopeful waiting has set in according to American Glass Review. December always is a month of slow demand as well as decreased production and 1931 is maintaining that reputation, only more effectively than recent years.

Demand from the distributing trade and from large consumers has eased off from the point reached a month ago. Inventories are in order and there is also doubt as to future trends. This being the situation, only those who need glass immediately are purchasing. Purchases for stock are being held up in most cases until inventories show the current condition.

The effect of the presidential order reducing the duty on window glass imports 25 per cent is uncertain. It came at an inopportune time because the Belgian manufacturers have found their markets in Great Britain and other countries curtailed by increasing tariffs and a reduction here will interest them. As far as can be learned, there is still a "spread" between American prices, which are the lowest in history, and import prices. This situation is puzzling the manufacturers as is also the possible effect of increased freight rates.

COPPER CONFAB HITS SNAG

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—A new hitch is reported in copper circles to have developed in efforts to curtail world production of copper.

While its exact nature could not be learned, it was said to involve a detail in copper marketing abroad. The question was raised by a large American producer, it was said, and thus far other world producers have declined to agree to the American company's viewpoint.

Trade circles said that if a compromise became necessary it would involve considerable time and would necessitate a complete change in a part of the foreign selling agreement that has been in effect since 1927.

Impaired Freight Cars Show Gain

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Class I railroads on November 15 had 197,100 freight cars in need of repairs or 9.1 per cent of the number on lines, according to the American Railway Association.

This was an increase of 2,152 cars above the number in need of repair on November 1 at which time there were 194,948 or 9.0 per cent.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

CEMENT TRADE MAKES RAPID STRIDES

Advanced Concrete Methods Insure Greater Production, Abolish Seasonal Factors

Ten years ago a dozen men labored to mix and pour 25 yards of concrete a day. Today, J. E. Burke, general manager of the Ready Mixed Concrete Company, estimates, 29 men including truck drivers can prepare and pour 1,200 yards of concrete in eight hours. The difference in production totals tells the story of the swift advancement made in equipment and methods in the concrete industry.

Haphazard methods of mixing have given way to an accurate control system. The water-cement ratio, proportionate amounts of gravel and admixtures specified by the purchaser are determined by weights and measures which entirely eliminate guess work and enable reliable predictions of ultimate load carrying capacity 28 days later.

TESTS RELIABLE

The design of mixes is determined by the strength requirements of the job. Control tests on sand and gravel moisture made with a specific gravity flask are conducted 12 times daily. Findings are indicated on vertical scales and deducted from the specific water-cement ratio desired.

In winter all material is heated by steam before mixing and maintained at a constant temperature of not less than 70 degrees Fahrenheit during transit. The time of the haul of each batch is carefully estimated. Tests made at various external temperatures determine the proper initial temperature of a mix for a given length of haul. Rules based on the results of these tests are found to be reliable in maintaining constant temperatures during long hauls in cold weather. These facilities make concrete work as practical and easy in winter as in summer, Mr. Burke said.

CLAIMS RECORD

Although the Ready Mixed Concrete Company operates 47 trucks, most of them agitators and truck mixers, two central mixing plants, at 27 Barbeau street and Twenty-second street and the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad are maintained to secure greater accuracy in proportioning materials and controlling temperatures.

According to Mr. Burke the Ready Mixed Concrete Company accomplished the greatest yardage ever poured in Pittsburgh in one day: 635 yards in eight hours on the McCann Building. Other projects it has supplied concrete for are: Koppers, Grant, Roosevelt Hotel, Cathedral Mansions, Plaza, City Ice and Fuel and Gulf Buildings; Liberty Bridge piers; Boulevard of the Allies and Duquesne University front walls; Mellon Institute pedestals and Mt. Lebanon, Arsenal, Larimer, Davis and Knoxville schools.

RETAIL TRADE SHOWS GAIN

There has been a moderate increase in retail trade this week with holiday buying more noticeable according to R. G. Dun and Company's weekly review.

The average price paid seems to be considerably lower than a year ago and the total volume of business is the lowest for a number of years. Sales of men's wearing apparel continue slow and while there has been some improvement in women's wearing apparel lines the demand is almost entirely for the cheaper grades.

The movement of jewelry is somewhat better, but prices are the lowest in years and the volume of business transacted is comparatively small. There is a fair demand for toys, the cheaper grades being in fairly good demand.

While the demand for bituminous coal is somewhat better for heating purposes, industrial demand continues slow and production is about 20 per cent lower than a year ago.

Collection conditions show practically no change, averaging slow in most lines.

Penn Mex Fuel Gets Large Producer

Penn Mex Fuel has completed a 5,000 barrel well in a section of the Pasorial district which proves up an extension of the company's oil producing territory. This is the largest well completed by Penn Mex within a year. Penn Mex is controlled by South Penn Oil Company.

Common Dividend of Gulf Oil Omitted

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE VAST DIFFERENCE between a large surplus and a strong current financial position was illustrated yesterday when the directors of the Gulf Oil Corporation decided to omit the regular quarterly dividend of 37½ cents.

This rate had been paid since January 1, 1923, following a split of the old stock on a 12 for one basis. For years earnings were many times the dividend rate but by far the greater share of profits was reinvested in the company's business to provide for the organization's persistent refinancing program.

During the prosperous years of the oil industry, Gulf's low dividend rate was the subject of widespread comment. While it has paid its stockholders only $1.50 a share annually since 1923 it earned $2.35 a share in 1930, $9.83 in 1929, $8.06 in 1928, $3.08 in 1927, $7.95 in 1926, $7.97 in 1925, $4.39 in 1924 and $3.28 in 1923.

Surplus Increased

AS A RESULT of this policy the company consistently added to its surplus. Total earned surplus at the close of 1930 was $210,016,214. This was equivalent to $46.41 a share on 4,525,221 shares outstanding at the close of the year.

Stockholders, who had been compelled to content themselves with only a fraction of the earnings during long years of prosperity, believed that eventually the company would increase its dividend rate, split the stock or at least would be well fortified to maintain the old rate of dividend through adverse years. The fallacy of this belief has been demonstrated by the omission of the dividend.

Cost of Expansion

IN THE YEARS from 1923 to 1930 Gulf spent its excess earnings in addition to funds received from the sale of bonds for expansion. The plant account increased from $255,820,807 at the close of 1923 to $587,751,204 at the close of 1930, a gain of $331,930,397. During this period the company made large provisions for depletion and depreciation. This reserve increased from $109,381,083 to $272,852,770 or $163,471,687. Deducting this gain from the increase in the total value of physical properties indicates a net new investment in operating facilities of $168,458,710.

The discontinuance of the dividend was made necessary by the fact that excessive earnings of past years are represented by newly developed oil fields, new refineries and new pipe lines, not by liquid assets. In order to pay for its expansion program Gulf sold $35,000,000 of debenture 5s in 1927 and $60,000,000 of collateral sinking fund gold 5s of its subsidiary, the Union Gulf Corporation, in 1930. These added to a previously outstanding issue and after deducting bonds retired by sinking funds left a funded debt of $125,904,000 outstanding at the close of 1930.

Current Position

GULF SHOWED A GOOD cash position at the close of 1930, but this was before the completion of the new pipe line from Tulsa to Pittsburgh and the construction of refineries at Toledo, Cincinnati and in this city.

Eventually Gulf Oil's stockholders will benefit from the vast amounts invested in its physical properties, but this program has been too great to permit the continued payment of dividends during periods of unsatisfactory operations in the oil industry.

Pipe Organ Merger Plan Is Approved

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Stockholders today approved a consolidation of the Skinner Organ Company, of Boston, and the pipe organ division of the Aeolian Company, of New York, under the name Aeolian Skinner Organ Company, Inc. The change is effective January 2.

Manufacturing facilities of the two companies will be combined in the Skinner plant at Boston.

STEEL ACTIVITY IN SEASONAL DECLINE

Trade Expects Only Mild Increase During January; Price Structure Weakens

By B. E. V. LUTY

Average daily rate of steel ingot production increased 8.1 per cent from October to November while the rate has since declined to but little above the October rate and December will probably average under October. The November increase was due partly to releases on some old fabricated structural steel contracts and that influence has since come off while there is usual seasonal decrease, which will be more marked around holiday time.

Total production of all ingots this year will probably be a trifle above rather than below 25,000,000 tons, about 63 per cent of last year and 46 per cent of the record year, 1929, but 55 per cent of the average in the seven years through 1929, a period of great activity only interrupted slightly by two short periods of relatively light production. From the steel consumption standpoint the year has not done at all badly considering the circumstances but from the production standpoint the view is different, the year's total being only about 36 per cent of present or prospective capacity.

NEW PRICE SYSTEM

While the steel price structure has lately been showing weaknesses in spots there is strong seller resistance to declines and hopes are entertained of recent weaknesses in hot rolled strips, plates and shapes being corrected. Automobile sheets are definitely easier, at $3 to $3.10 against $3.10 flat formerly quoted as the general market. On the other hand wire mills are advancing nails $1 per ton and barbwire, staples, etc. $3, no change being made in plain wire.

A new system is set up whereby buyers will not be classified and character of order will determine the price, whether for a straight carload, a mixed carload, a joint carload, a pool carload or a less than carload lot. Jobbers will be better protected on distribution from stock, but will have no opportunity to sell for direct mill shipment.

LETTINGS ARE LIGHT

Year-end conditions, as to liquidation of stocks, holiday closings, etc., lay foundation for a rebound in activity in January and this will presumably occur, but only mild increase is now expected, to be followed by further increase as general trade and financial conditions improve. There has been no railroad buying lately and there can be nothing but improvement in that direction. Receivers are permitted to make some purchases while when a road is endeavoring to forestall receivership it is likely to do nothing.

For 10 successive weeks fabricated structural steel lettings have been reported very light and little is now expected until after the holidays. Much work is under consideration, but closing depends largely on financial and other conditions.

P. S. A. ENROLLS RECORD CLASS

Pittsburgh School of Accountancy, in the opening session of its post-graduate class, discovered that the largest number in history had enrolled.

This group, which will have one more meeting next Friday, and then disband until March 15, is composed of men who are preparing to take the state examination for the degree of certified public accountant.

The downtown school has been very successful in the records of its candidates, over 50 per cent of whom passed the examination last year. The usual percentage of successful candidates is near to 60 or 70 per cent.

Associated System's Electric Output Up

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—For the month of November, Associated Gas and Electric System reports electric output totaling 272,244,623 units (kwh), an increase of 6.5 per cent above November of last year. For the 12 months ended November 30, electric output totaled 3,220,377,262 units, or 6.3 per cent above the previous 12 months.

Gas output for November was 1,438,127,700 cubic feet, or 8.6 per cent below November, 1930. For the 12 months period, gas output totaled 17,926,533,900 cubic feet, or 2.1 per cent below the same period of 1930.

TREND BUCKERS TO RECEIVE REWARD

1932 Held Unlikely to Be Year of Easy Prosperity; Fluctuating Prices Seen

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—As this year of extraordinary readjustments and shocks draws to a close, new attempts will be made to take first of the year inventories of national resources and prospects.

Even though the future in any precise sense is unknowable, every business executive and investor must currently make commitments based on conjectures concerning future developments. Economic success is to be found not in avoiding risks, but in selecting them wisely and in hedging against reverses through wide diversification.

Mr. Rukeyser

In accordance with this seasonal industry of forecasting, H. G. Wells, in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, indicated that if the economic world could drag along through 1932 without wide open collapses, it would be on the highway toward genuine recuperation.

WELLS FORECAST

Mr. Wells' hope is that 1932 is to be a dull, quiet year, rather than a spectacular one. Here is the kernel of his thought:

"Will 1932 be a great date in history? I hope not. I am afraid that if some out-of-the-way vast event or group of events occurs, it will be in the nature of a catastrophe. A. D. 1932 may be a very black year indeed for mankind. But if there is nothing exceptionally astounding and terrible to fix 1932 as a cardinal date, then I think New Year's Day, 1933, may be a fairly hopeful anniversary. I think if we can carry on without either some dire social convulsion or the onset of harsh suppressions until January, 1933, we shall have got through the worst of the immediate dangers that threaten our civilization."

If, as may well be the case, the world is on the verge of a gradual period of economic convalescence, then numerous securities of solvent and well-managed corporations are doubtless undervalued at the market place. The prevailing prices do not scientifically reflect what the future has in store, but more particularly the fears and delusions in men's minds.

REWARDS FOR ALERT

To those who seek to peer through the curtain of the future, it now appears that 1932 is unlikely to be a year of easy prosperity. The chief rewards will again go to the trend buckers, to the alert who are able to sense developments in advance and to those who are most enterprising in eliminating waste and in forecasting public tastes and desires.

I think that the balance of probabilities makes it wholly unlikely that the business man will be harassed by anywhere near as many disturbing events as in 1931. The line of least resistance for security and commodity prices may well be irregularly upward, rather than downward, though I look for seesaw tendencies in prices until the economic trend is more clearly discernable.

The big unknown factor is the extent to which a "managed recovery" will be attempted through conscious counter deflationary programs, such as controlled credit expansion via a huge federal loan for public works.

Larger Reduction In Wheat Acreage

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—R. O. Cromwell, of Lamson Bros., as of December 10, estimates winter wheat acreage at 36,162,000 acres, against 42,422,000 seeded last year, a decrease of 14.8 per cent. Condition is 80.8, against the 10-year average of 83.2.

Rye acreage is put at 3,636,000, against 4,026,000 acres last year.

LOCAL TEAMS TO HAVE BUSIEST YEAR

Pittsburgh's college football teams will see more action next season than ever before. Longer schedules will be the order. For the first time since 1908 Pitt has put 10 games on its regular slate, the limit in the meantime having been nine, except for the specially arranged extra contests on the Coast following the seasons of 1922, 1927 and 1929, and the Carnegie Tech schedule for 1932 announced today by Graduate Manager Clarence Overend shows that the Tartans also have listed 10 engagements.

Clarence Overend

This will be only the second time Carnegie has ever played 10 games in a season since it broke into the major ranks, the lone departure having been chronicled in 1927 when the Skibos went to Portland for a tenth contest with Oregon State. Even with the charity game against Duquesne added this year the Scots took part in only nine tilts. As the Dukes, in all probability, will also card 10 events for 1932, each of the local big schools will play that number of games, making the combined total the highest in the history of the trio.

IT WON'T BE long until another good attraction for the gridiron fans of the district is booked to fill the only vacancy in the Carnegie schedule. Manager Overend is negotiating with several schools of national football reputation for a game at the Stadium on the one date remaining open, November 5, and expects to close with one of them in a short time.

As compared with the list of teams met on this year's schedule, the charity game not counted, the Plaid's program for next season shows three changes, these being the substitution of Howard Harpster's Geneva team for Buffalo, the replacing of Georgia Tech by Western Reserve, and the intended booking of another eleven to take the place of Purdue. There are two other departures in extra games, one with Xavier University in Cincinnati and the other with St. Louis University in St. Louis.

THE SCHENLEY PARKERS will play four games at home with Geneva, W. & J., Pitt and a team yet to be scheduled for November 5, and six contests abroad with Western Reserve, Notre Dame, Temple, Xavier, New York U. and St. Louis. Their season's activities will be scattered over seven cities, a strong bid for the rambling title.

The Pitt game was shifted to November 19 to enable the Panthers to schedule a meeting with Penn. Thanksgiving Day again will find the Tartans in New York opposing New York U. at the Yankee Stadium. The locals for the third straight time will make a trip to Philadelphia to play Temple, but there will be a change in arrangements in 1933 and the Owls will come to Pittsburgh.

NOTRE DAME'S annual two games with Pittsburgh teams will again come on successive Saturdays next fall, as the Tartans are to visit South Bend October 22 and the Irish will play Pitt here on October 29. The Scots will get plenty of the Notre Dame system, as Xavier and St. Louis also use the Irish style of game, so that Carnegie will face that type of play three times. The Xavier game will be the first with that school. It is a rapidly rising institution, with a fine athletic plant and a stadium seating 18,000. St. Louis is another school that has come forward fast.

Timmy Lawry

TWO UNIVERSITIES THAT take their basketball teams very seriously will send those same teams out to do battle with each other tonight in the season's opener at the Stadium, with the passers of Temple University, of Philadelphia, threatening to give the Pitt Panthers as much opposition as the latter may care to buck.

Temple has had good floor teams for the last five years, and hopes to have an even better one this season. And the Panthers, who have been good for the same length of time, will have to travel faster than ever to get through the 1931-32 campaign successfully. Either team can make its prospects much rosier by winning tonight.

TEMPLE WILL BE depending for its offense on the two men who led the scoring last season, and Pitt will be doing the same thing. The Owls' leading scorers were Co-Capt. Fitch and Gudd, a big center. For the Panthers, Co-Capts. Timmy Lawry and Doc Kowallis were high last season, Lawry topping his partner by a few points.

Gudd, Temple's crack center, will be making his first appearance in Pittsburgh. He is rated one of the greatest athletes in Temple history, starring in football, baseball and track, as well as in basketball. Only a junior, he is expected to add further honors to his collection, and his teammates are predicting that he will make a start in that direction tonight.

THAT FOOTBALL MEETING of Southern California and Tulane in Pasadena on New Year's Day wouldn't be so hot as a national championship number if Georgia were to defeat Southern California in Los Angeles this afternoon. But that's not likely to happen. The Trojans have never met a southern team, it is true, and no southern eleven ever lost a game in the Los Angeles region until Florida was beaten by U. C. L. A. on Thanksgiving Day, this year, but whatever comparison of today's principals is possible from outside angles indicates an edge for the Trojans. Georgia was outplayed by New York U. and was fortunate to squeeze out a 7-to-6 victory. Oregon beat New York U. much more easily than did Georgia, 14 to 6, and yet Southern California smothered Oregon, 53 to 0.

THE TROJANS HAVE been ailing since the game with Washington last Saturday. Johnny Baker, guard and goal kicker, pulled a cartilage near his lower ribs, Tom Mallory, left halfback, came out with a bruised hip, and his understudy, Gordon Clark, suffered a cracked knee.

But even if it is found necessary to shift Jim Musick to left half, with Ernie Pinckert at right half, Orv Mohler at quarter and Gaius Shaver at fullback, the reconstructed team will look strong enough to defeat Georgia. The Bulldogs did a lot of roaming this year, by the way, playing in Athens, New Haven, Chapel Hill, Gainesville, New York, Columbus, Ga., and Los Angeles.

ANY DEAL THAT Bill McKechnie might try to make for Hack Wilson could not now include Lance Richbourg, in view of the sale of the latter to the Cubs by the Braves, but the Wilkinsburg citizen still is hopeful of acquiring Wilson on other terms.

Richbourg has been shunted around to a far greater extent than the average player. Chicago is his fifth major league stop in little more than a decade, as he was with the Giants in 1919, the Phillies in 1921, the Senators in 1924 and the Braves since 1927. And yet he's by no means a poor ball player. He ought to help the Cubs.

Battling Battalino

ONE YEAR AGO today Battling Battalino started to prove himself something more than a cheese champion by defeating Kid Chocolate, the first formidable featherweight title challenger against whom he could be induced to take a chance. Since that time he has given much additional evidence of a surprising improvement, and if any doubt of his class had continued to linger he would have swept it away by the neat job he did in New York last night in putting Al Singer away in the second round. Singer is notoriously unable to take it, but at the same time it was quite a feat for a featherweight to go out of his division and stop him in such short order. It may mark the beginning of a campaign by Battalino to go after the lightweight title and it is no safe bet that he won't get there.

Eyes right, aim steady and with the whistles of the referees to the front, the varsity basketball teams of the University of Pittsburgh and Temple University, of Philadelphia, pry open the intercollegiate campaign here tonight in the Stadium pavilion. The contest will be the closing feature of the second annual basketball clinic sponsored by Pitt and organized and inaugurated a year ago by Dr. Hal Carlson, celebrated Panther mentor.

In a preliminary game, the most promising freshman team Pitt ever has boasted will open its season by tackling Taylor Allderdice High School.

The Temple game offers supporters of the game here a true big-league inaugural. The Philadelphians rate with the best college quintets in the East. They have a fine record over the past four or five years, and in two previous meetings with the Panthers have pressed the locals to the very limit.

TEMPLE POWERFUL

With six lettermen on hand for this year, and a wealth of promising sophomore material, the Owls figure to be stronger than they were a year back, while Pitt, losing men of the caliber of Arture, Les and Milt Cohen, Eddie Baker and Bus Albright, certainly is not as formidable as in 1930-31.

The Pitt starting lineup tonight figures to consist of the co-captains, Timmy Lawry and Willie Kowallis at the forwards, lanky Russ Ochsenhirt at center and Don McCamant and stellar Don Smith at the guards. A last minute change may find Smith in at center, with Tip Kowallis playing his guard position and Ochsenhirt roosting on the bench beside Carlson, where he will be able to get a line on how things are going.

Temple's starting setup also is somewhat uncertain. Co-Captains Fitch, a pip of a forward, and O'Brien, a guard, seem to be fixtures. The veteran Len Gudd is likely to start at center, with Goldberger at the other forward and Eddie Beron, another vet, at the other guard. Kilkuskie, a dead shot and fine floorman, will be in the action early. He's too good a man to keep out. He'll be Goldberger's sub the minute the going becomes too torrid for Goldie.

WALLACE TO REFEREE

Two fine officials, Yans Wallace and Leo Mackey have been selected to handle the ball game. They are aces.

The clinic will get under way this morning, with an exhibition of various systems and styles of play by the Pitt squad and followed by a lecture by Dr. Carlson. More than 400 high school and college coaches and players are expected to be on hand. After a dinner in the evening, the visitors will be guests of the University at the game.—JESS CARVER.

SINGER HALTED BY BATTALINO

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Al Singer, brilliant Jewish boy, who won and lost a lightweight championship in a total of two rounds, lasted only another pair last night as the bristling fists of Christopher (Bat) Battalino smashed him again from the ranks of the top notch little men.

Stepping out of the featherweight class, the champion, carrying so much weight that he out-scaled the lightweight, Battalino battered Singer to the floor three times in the first round and twice in the second before Referee Patsy Haley stepped in to save the former lightweight king from further punishment after 31 seconds of the second. A crowd of 17,000 paid $46,918 into the coffers of the Hearst Christmas Fund, sponsors of the show.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE DIX FAMILY OF PUBLISHERS—Three generations of the Dix family, of Wooster, O., now are actively engaged in newspaper publication. E. C. Dix, 58, publishes the Wooster (O.) Record, assisted by his father, Albert Dix, who is 86; A. V. Dix, 30, is the publisher of the Ravenna (O.) Record, so it appears inevitable that A. V. Dix, Jr., his 2-year-old son, will be at a copy desk within a few years. And it is most curious to note that there is exactly 28 years between each of the four generations.

Sarazen, Cooper Beaten on Coast

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Four outstanding contenders bowed to lesser-known opponents in sensational first and second rounds of the $7,500 national match-play open championship yesterday.

Leo Diegel, of Agua Caliente, defending champion, and Billy Burke, of Greenwich, Conn., moved to the quarter-finals.

Diegel defeated Sid Marmon, of Salt Lake City, 7 and 6, and R. Asami, of Yokohama, champion of Japan, 5 and 3.

Burke nosed out T. Miyamoto, of Osaka, champion of his country in 1929 and 1930, on the twentieth.

Gene Sarazen, former national open champion, was defeated by Al Zimmerman, of Portland, 3 and 4, in the second round.

Harry Cooper, of New York, and Frank Walsh, of Chicago, lost second-round matches. Cooper bowed to Frank Morrison, of Beverly Hills, on the nineteenth, while Romie Espinosa, of San Francisco, showed the way to Walsh with a 1-up win.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—The tramp-tramp-tramp of the Army Corps and the Regiment of Midshipmen rose faintly today over football's all but deserted fields, warning of the last great eastern spectacle of the gridiron season, the Army-Navy game.

Charity and the need of the unemployed again bring the two youthful branches of Uncle Sam's services together in the Yankee Stadium today, healing further the breach that developed four years ago, indicating that animosities are all but forgotten, and the annual drama is back to stay.

$350,000 FOR CHARITY

Despite forecast of rain, at least 75,000 spectators are expected to witness the battle.

The gate receipts will be close to $400,000, of which approximately $350,000 will be distributed to charity by the two academies. Expenses, including transportation of the entire brigade of Midshipmen from Annapolis and the Cadet Corps from West Point, amounts to about $50,000.

The national networks will broadcast the details of the contest through some 150 stations. By short-wave transmission, the radio will carry the play-by-play account to the American forces at sea, as well as to foreign lands.

ARMY FAVORED

Army is a favorite to win and continue its post-war domination of the service series, but the odds have shortened to 7 to 5 as a result of a rush of Navy backing this week.

Oblivious to all this preliminary debate, however, the rival squads kept in seclusion most of yesterday in Westchester, prepared for a quick dash to the stadium this morning.

Both teams have come through strong in their last games. Army sprang a sensation by decisively beating Notre Dame, 12 to 0, after which Navy manifested its growing power by beating Pennsylvania, 6 to 0.

TARTANS CARD NINE GAMES

Graduate Manager of Athletics Clarence Overend has announced nine scheduled games for the 1932 Tartan football squad, with the possibility of a tenth yet to be added. The Skibos open their season October 1 against Geneva in the Stadium and ring down the curtain against St. Louis University at St. Louis, December 3.

Only one new foe appears on the card, Xavier University, of Cincinnati, which is to be played at that city November 12. The following schedule has been set:

October 1—Geneva, at the Stadium.
October 8—Western Reserve, at Cleveland.
October 15—W. & J., at Stadium.
October 22—Notre Dame, at South Bend.
October 29—Temple, at Philadelphia.

November 19—Pitt, at Stadium.
November 24—New York University, at Yankee Stadium.

SCHOOL RATINGS LIKELY TO BE ADJUSTED

By JULIUS LEVIN

The members of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League opened their annual winter conference at the Fifth Avenue High School this morning.

Every school enrolled in the league has a representative at the session and many important matters were under discussion.

Steps were to be taken to make an adjustment in the ratings of Class A and Class B schools. Ratings are made on the basis of student enrollments.

The point system which governs the championship football race and the Class AA conference also will be given attention by the school authorities.

SCOTT FIVE WINS

Scott High of North Braddock set down Wilkinsburg 37-12. Dormont whipped Shady Side Academy 46-10 and Langley pumped Sewickley 25-15 in leading scholastic basketball contests yesterday.

Brashock popped a 27-21 victory over the heads of the Munhall quint. East McKeesport nosed out Elizabeth 14-12. Rankin walloped East Pittsburgh 34-5. Donora knocked off Clairton 28-19. Perry whipped Bellevue 26-12. Monaca bowed to Leetsdale 18-13 and Crafton won over Avalon 20-18.

New Kensington's strong five bumped Duquesne 23-16. Ben Avon copped from Bridgeville 13-11 and Mars won from Springdale 20-16.

JURKOVSKY ELECTED

Ed Jurkovsky tackle was elected captain of the 1932 Washington High School football team at a banquet held by the undefeated Little Presidents in the Trinity Episcopal Church, Washington, last night. Sam Mawhinney returning captain and chosen all-W. P. I. A. L. tackle by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph during the past season was toastmaster.

Among the speakers were Meyers B. Horner, superintendent of Washington schools; R. E. Bowser, principal of Washington High School; Glenn Wild, Wash-Jeff freshman coach; Joe Hart, Washington Reporter; Charles Bertram, Washington Observer; Phil Berry, assistant coach; J. W. G. Hannon, president of the Washington High Alumni Association; Bill Ashbaugh, Steve Day, Carl Vance, Bas Gray, Bill Greed and George Drury, all former Washington stars; Manager Dominic Frank, Coach Hank Day and Julius Levin of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Day paid a high tribute to the 1931 team, rating it the greatest he has coached in Washington in the 16 years he has been at that school. Twelve regulars concluded their careers. They are Amon, Anderson, Bryan, Capo, Graff, McBurney, H. McWreath, A. McWreath, Moriarity, Pauliekas, Hennen and J. Wilson.

GEORGIA READY FOR U. S. C.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Nemesis of western football for several years, the South, as represented by a gallant group of Georgians, will put to acid test today the University of Southern California on the Olympic Stadium greensward.

Probably 75,000 persons will gather to see an intersectional clash of the first magnitude.

Both elevens are close to full strength. The Bulldogs probably will play the entire contest without Jack Roberts, the Ripper fullback, but otherwise have their best players available, including Vernon (Catfish) Smith, all-America end. The probable line-up:

Eddie Latko, of Cleveland, and Young Rudy, of Charleroi, fought a 10-round draw in the semi-final.

Sport Vignettes

The office wit says he's never surprised at any news that comes out of a joint meeting of the major leagues. . . . And did you notice that our hockey team was barely nosed out, 5-1 and 3-0, in its last two games? . . . Jess Quatse, Pitt's all-America tackle, lived as a boy in Rillton, Pa., near Irwin, which also gave the world Andy Mudras, our staff artist who draws those funny ears you see at the top of the main sports page every day. . . . Tom Birks, our soccer expert, recalls the fact that two deputies once had to escort him out of Rillton following a soccer game which he refereed there in which Madison won a $500 side bet on a penalty kick awarded by him. . . . But Tom demonstrated his courage by going back the following Saturday to officiate again, and no one as much as said "Boo" to him.

Naval Academy authorities refuse to admit or deny that both Carnegie Tech and Pitt are dickering to bring the Middies here for a football game in 1933, saying they have not yet completed their 1932 schedule. . . . Notre Dame loses Capt. Tom Yarr, center; Nordy Hoffman, guard; George Kozac and Regis McNamara, tackles, and Marchy Schwartz, Carl Cronin and Bernie Leahy, backs, from the ranks of its lettermen of this year by graduation. . . . The so-called Irish played to 528,000 paid admissions in nine games last year and to 429,000 in eight games this year.

With All-America Quatse and Rip Collins, of the Pitt team, joining the host of other stars in the lineups that ought to be quite a football game for the needy at West View tomorrow. . . . It's the Jimmy Rooney team, champion of the Western Pennsylvania Sandlot Conference, against an all-star team and the last chance of the year to see the big leaguers in the independent ranks perform.

There are two reasons why the Franklin and Marshall College polo team, of Lancaster, Pa., will play here during the Christmas holidays. . . . One of them is that Allen Holman, former Ohio State backfield star, now coach of the Franklin and Marshallers, also is a member of the River Ridge Riding Club polo team, of Columbus, O., and played against the locals during the summer. . . . The other is that King McCreery, former Shady Side Academy player, who opposed Holman in the game here, is a member of the F. & M. polo outfit, and is all enthused over the sport as it applies to Pittsburgh. . . . The game likely will be played on Saturday night, December 26, against the Pittsburgh Polo Club at the Hunt Armory.

The Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena, Cal., on New Year's Day will mark the first appearance of Tulane in that feature, but it will see the Trojans competing for the third time. The latter team defeated Penn State, 14-3, in 1923, and Pitt, 47-14, last year.

Tulane is the third Southern team to represent the East, the others having been Alabama, which won over Washington in 1926, tied Stanford in 1927 and won over Washington State this year, and Georgia Tech, which won, 8-7, in 1929 in the game featured by Roy Riegels' reverse run for Southern California. Thus the South never has been beaten in the classic. Tulane enters the coming game with a record of having been undefeated in games with Southern opponents over a period of three years.—HARRY KECK.

CARDS' TILT OFF

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Alfred E. Masters, general manager of the Stanford board of athletic control, has notified officials of Northwestern University that the board has acceded to their request for postponement of a football game here on October 8, 1932.

LOCAL ICEMEN CRIPPLED

By CARL W. SHATTO

The defeat which the Yellow Jackets were handed by the Detroit Olympics here Thursday cost the local skaters much more than third place in the International Hockey League standings, it was learned today.

When he was crowded into the boards in the second period, Eddie Rodden, diminutive center, who is the club's leading playmaker, suffered a severe hip bone bruise.

Earl Miller, lanky center, who has become a favorite with the fans as a result of his brilliant back checking, yesterday suffered such severe head pains that it was thought that he might have sustained a slight skull fracture when he stopped the butt of a Detroiter's stick with his temple, also in the second period.

Coach Charley Reid had X-ray pictures of the injuries to Rodden and Miller taken yesterday. Today he announced that the hurts were more painful than serious, and that his team would be at full strength when the Jackets meet the Stars in Syracuse next Tuesday.

This means that Gordy Fraser, defense ace who was out of the Detroit game with a crippled knee, also will be back in harness. Neither Fraser nor Rodden will be in top form for some time, but it is expected that Miller will be completely recovered from his injury by next week.

Despite their battered condition, Coach Reid put his warriors through two workouts yesterday, and two more drills were on today's program. Improved marksmanship is the leading aim of the local pilot.

Clairton to Meet Washington in 1932

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 12.—Gridiron athletes of Washington and Clairton high schools did not meet this year to decide the W. P. I. A. L. championship, but they have been definitely scheduled for next fall and the contention over the 1931 title is certain to cause added interest and rivalry in the 1932 clash. While dates are tentative as yet, it is understood they will meet in October.

Thirteen letter men will be lost by Washington, but those remaining will be ready to carry on.

Other Class AA opponents on the Blue and Black schedule will be Wilkinsburg, New Castle, Turtle Creek and Charleroi. Monaca, Aliquippa and Waynesburg again will have places on the schedule being arranged for Hank Day's boys.

Gibson to Leave For Canada Tonight

Manager George Gibson, of the Pirates, expected to leave tonight for his home in Ontario, where he will do his Christm s shopping and remain to plan next season's campaign for the Buccaneers. Gibson, in the company of Treasurer W. E. Benswanger and Secretary Sam Watters, returned to the city yesterday after having attended the major league conference in Chicago.

Gibson indicated that prospects are excellent for the consummation of several proposed trades, which are expected to be announced in the near future.

GIBBY WELCH RESIGNS

BARBOURVILLE, W. Va., Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Gilbert L. (Gibby) Welch, coach of the 1931 Morris Harvey College football team, announced at the annual football banquet last night that he had tendered his resignation to the Rev. Leonard Riggleman, president of the college. Rev. Riggleman, who is ill at his home here, said upon inquiry the resignation had not been formally accepted and he had no statement to make at this time.

JONES BEATS FIRPO

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Gorilla Jones, Akron, O., Negro, last night won the right to fight Oddone Piazza, of Italy, for the middleweight championship, by defeating Henry Firpo, of Louisville, in the semi-final bout of the National League Boxing Association's tournament here last night.

SOCCER TEAM TO DINE

Mrs. W. H. F. Miller, of 828 Richford street, Duquesne, will be hostess to the Duquesne Republican soccer team tonight as a reward for their 3-0 victory over McKeesport last week.

Duck! Bridge Ahead

By JESS CARVER

Instigator of the Famous Carver Convention

The more I read and hear about this Culbertson-Culbertson Lenz-Jacoby alibi battle of the century, the more I am sold on the idea that the Carvers (me and the missus) and the Coopers (Lou and Bill) have been passing up a swell bet for making good dough. We should have put on this bridge act long ago. Shucks, it's no trick at all for Bill to forget the trump; in fact, Bill often forgets he's playing bridge and starts jabbering about three of a kind, two pairs and the last Elks' convention.

Bill and I play about the same sort of game, nothing over which to rave, although the fraus do, at times, and nothing over which to be ashamed, either. We both know when I open with a club bid, and Bill goes batty and shouts no trump, he gets a dirty look from me and we go down three tricks. The Carver-Cooper convention was born after just such a dizzy play as the one I just mentioned. I yelped a club and he reyelped no-trump, and I threw the cards out of the window and we all went swimming—pardon—I mean, to a movie. I get my seasons all twisted.

BRIDGE TABLE SMALL TALK

Now, the good wives, and when I say good, I mean derned good, are nifty bridgists. Of course, their line of small chatter is nothing over which to go into a tailspin, being chiefly concerned with foulards, cretonnes, lace edgings, the trials and tribulations of nice girls married to guys like some they could name and other conversational fungi. One of 'em bids three hearts, and, in the same breath, cracks like this:

"My, but we MUST have a garden next spring."

Well, you'd better get wise to the fact pronto that the lady has a corner on spades as well as hearts, and, if you've anything that might make a no trump, you'd better say it or figure on spending a lot of evenings at home.

PLAY CONSERVATIVELY

William and I have been playing sort of a conservative game all along, one of those strategic retreat styles. What the heck, as Bill says, we ain't playing for no brick house, and why worry? Sure, he knows he forgets to count the cards once in a while, but, then, if the opposition has six or seven diamonds and Bill happens to bid 'em, then the opposition is sandbagging and does not deserve even Bill's disdain.

Willie and I always have to play after tough days at the office, and, naturally, are not at our best. Our wives are school teachers. Anyone who ever has been to school knows that all teachers ever do is stand around and ask silly questions they can't answer themselves half of the time and mark down red zeros in books and keep kids in when they should be out bothering the neighbors or playing ball or something.

So we gather around the old table and the hostess gets out the decks, which we count and no two missing out of one deck and three out of the other, and the missing cards turn up in the papoose's doll carriage. Then we deal and Bill has to get up from the table for a drink of water and to take off his coat and roll up his sleeves and hunt a cigaret. Meanwhile the fraus are getting madder and madder and I pick up a bum hand and accidentally mess up all the cards and we deal over.

JOKE SPOILS EVERYTHING

About that time, the 'phone rings and Chuck Dickson's wife wants to borrow three pounds of sugar and a bottle capper. We deal again and the missus tells a joke she heard at the bridge club the night before and Bill fails to get the point and I blush and have to diagram it, and, when that is over, we find out it wasn't such a hot joke, after all, and the wife is peeved and bids three spades, goes down two, doubled, and takes it out by making a crack something like this:

"Say, big boy, what time DID you get in last night?"

And that spoils any evening, and, besides, it makes me take my mind off the game to think up a new alibi. I hate repetition and the wife has a memory like an elephant.

Yes, it is a great act, this Carver-Cooper bridge game. The conventions, cards, players, peaces of mind and dispositions all get a workout. We wind up having something to eat, I drink too much coffee and eat too much of Lou's good devil food cake and spend a sleepless night reflecting on my sins, if any.

FRANKLIN BOOKS LOCAL BOXERS

Pittsburgh district stars will make up an all-star card at Franklin, Pa., on the afternoon of New Year's Day.

Tiger Joe West and Joe (Jocko) Walters, middleweights, will box the top spot, with Joey Speigal, of Uniontown, and Matty Oldach, of Erie, in the other 10-round bout making up a double windup. Eddie Hebner, of Clairton, meets Bobby Vogel and Johnny Warner, of Clairton, engages Eddie Robinson, of Franklin, in two six-round preliminaries.

Battling Gizzy and Jimmy Thomas, who appeared in the two principal bouts at Motor Square Garden last Monday night, box in similar roles at Franklin next Monday, the former against Mickey Doyle and the latter against Joe Botta.

A dispute is on about which of the two eight-rounders at the Garden next Monday night shall be the semi-final. Joey Speigal, who is advertised to meet Davy Grove in the first eight-rounder, contends he rates the top position because of the fact that both Sid Silas and Benny McArthur, who are billed for the semi-final, have refused to box him, and Grove his opponent, appeared in the semi-final his last time out. Willie Davies and Mose Butch are in the main bout.

A card of amateur bouts and a battle royal will be staged in the Moose Temple, downtown Pittsburgh, tonight for the benefit of the furloughed employes of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

Girls' Basketball Teams Discontinued

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 12.—Basketball as a varsity sport for girl athletes in Washington County is on the wane and half a dozen schools, heretofore represented, will not have teams this year. Foremost among those announcing discontinuance of varsity competition for girls are Charleroi and East Bethlehem high schools. Blaine Township and others also will be missing.

Heretofore it has been highly popular with a tournament in the spring concluding their activities. While not maintaining varsity teams, most schools will conduct interclass contests.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association Inter-Club League luminaries hop into the second round of weekly action on the courts of the P. A. A. and the Pittsburgh Golf Club this afternoon. Both home aggregations join battle with the advance dope set against them, the crack University Club host, winner over the K. A. C., being favored to nose out the Winged Head array and Dave Gilmore's up-and-coming Allegheny Country Club combine enjoying an edge over the untried Golfers, who remained idle last Saturday as their quartet of rivals inaugurated circuit competition.

P. A. A., defeated by Allegheny, 3-2, in the opener, offers a sadly depleted lineup against the varsity quintet. Perce Siverd, ace of the Red and Gray, and Capt. Fred McMahon, regular third man of the Winged Headers, will be out of town today, which means that Coach Mortlock must fill in with George Kepler and Dr. Stegeman, capable performers, but inexperienced in competition.

O'LOUGHLIN COPS

Dr. Dave O'Loughlin slipped P. A. A. first blood in the U. C. fracas by trimming Alf Hamilton, 15-13, 15-11, 15-10, in a joust moved ahead to Thursday, but what the rest of the Fifth-and-Bigelow squad can accomplish in the face of Frank McClintock, Frank White, Charley Fagan and Paul Hicks is exceedingly problematical.

Meanwhile, McCook Reed, Wolfe, Heron and company—a really powerful Golf Club delegation—will strive to step off in midseason form and thus minimize the morale-bolstering certainly effected in Allegheny ranks by the Sewickleyites' unexpected setback of the titled P. A. A. contingent.

NEW LOOP TO OPEN

Gilmore, Robinson, Rush and Quay, however, can be depended upon to flash keen work, and, as stated above, must be conceded a slight advantage until the contrary is proved.

The new Class B division of the racquet wheel gets under way next Thursday with P. A. A. visiting Pittsburgh Golf Club and Edgeworth blowing into the Keystone A. C. The personnel of the secondary teams has yet to be announced, but plenty of fast talent is available in all four camps.

Taberski and Camp Cop Cue Victories

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Frank Taberski, of Schenectady, N. Y., defeated Onofrio Lauri, of Brooklyn, 125 to 16, in six innings, while Marcel Camp set down Andrew Ponzi, of Philadelphia, 125 to 101, in 13 innings, in last night's championship pocket billiard tourney play.

Ralph Greenleaf, with five victories and no defeats, remains atop the standings.

Erwin Rudolph clipped off 113 in 18 minutes of play to lead Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo., but was forced to go 13 innings to win, 125 to 44. George Kelly, of Philadelphia, defeated Robert Lindblom, of Seattle, 125 to 109, in 18 innings.

FALL ON GLASS PERILS LIFE OF AUTO VICTIM

Fragment Pierces Youth's Skull, Operation Follows; 6 Hurt Go to Hospitals

Six persons were in hospitals today suffering from injuries as a result of automobile accidents last night and early this morning. Several others were treated by physicians and sent to their homes.

Michael Evans, 22, of 1341 Woods Run avenue, was in Presbyterian Hospital, and Miss Zelmira Devcka, 21, of 1506 Forsythe street, in Allegheny General Hospital, with injuries suffered when their automobile skidded on the wet pavement and crashed into a pole at the Ohio River boulevard and Superior street. Both were said to be in serious condition.

Girard Weber, 16, of 246½ Atter way, was seriously injured when a fragment of glass upon which he fell after he was struck by an automobile at Thirty-fifth and Butler streets, penetrated his skull.

The driver, Tony Zgello, of 323 Downing street, took Weber to St. Margaret's Hospital, where an emergency operation to save his life was performed.

TWO CUT IN CRASH

David Williams, 21, of 4154 Winterburn street, and two passengers, Robert Douglas, 22, of 3702 Nantasket street, and Helen Coyne, 17, of 918 Deely street, were suffering from cuts and bruises today as the result of an automobile accident on the Panther Hollow Bridge in Schenley Park.

The machine in which they were riding collided with another car, driven, police said, by Charles Lindenheimer, 57, of 105 Lowell street. The victims were treated at Homeopathic Hospital. Lindenheimer, police said, was arrested for violating the automobile laws.

PEDESTRIANS HURT

Joseph Zaccari, 45, of 2611 Woodstock avenue, Swissvale, was recovering in his home from injuries received when he was struck by an auto driven by Charles Starr, of Columbia avenue, Swissvale, according to police, at Braddock and Woodstock avenues, Swissvale.

John Gutowski, 18, of 517 Eighth street, Ambridge, was treated by a physician for bruises and lacerations after, police said, he stepped from behind a parked automobile into the path of a machine driven by Lawrence Welsh, of 104 North avenue, Tarentum.

SEEK GIRLS' AID IN DEATH QUIZ

Coroner W. J. McGregor today was to question Sylvia Laughner, 22, of Sickle street, Wilkinsburg, and Alice Devlin, 25, of 415 Arch street, in connection with the death of John Devlin, 37, of 1020 Western avenue.

Homicide detectives who investigated the death said the two young women were not implicated in any way, but that authorities were anxious to check stories told by them.

Miss Laughner had been Devlin's nurse for almost a year, following an attempt by Devlin to end his life by drinking poison. Miss Devlin, who was not related to the dead man, was visiting Miss Laughner when Devlin died. An autopsy by the Coroner's physician showed that death was caused by a gas condition in the stomach. Poison found in his room led to the investigation, detectives said.

PLEADS GUILTY, NAMES SLEUTH

A constable told him that if he stole slot machines the owners could not prosecute, Lawrence Vetterly, 36, of 6937 Hamilton avenue, declared in testimony before Judge James H. Gray in Criminal Court yesterday.

Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk noted the name of the deputy constable and began an investigation. Vetterly, with Clyde Pierce, 28, and Marion Bowser, 23, both of 7331 Kelly street, had pleaded guilty to stealing slot machines from four places.

Judge Gray remanded them to jail to await sentence after they testify against James Murdo, alias Nick Costello, of Larimer avenue, to whom the trio said they sold the slot machines. Murdo refused to plead guilty.

The men said they stole slot machines from Fred Flurak, Penn Township; Louis Seleko, Braddock; Rose Kramer, Rankin; William Daugherty, Braddock, and L. N. Stewart, Frankstown and Lang avenues.

Vetterly said a deputy named L. Swanhart, of Wilkinsburg, told him he could "get away with" slot machine thefts. Two years ago, he declared, another deputy named Russell Thompson took him on a raid in which machines were seized, and later he, Pierce and Bowser started raiding by themselves.

Backseat Drivers Named in Auto Injury Suit

PARIS, Mo., Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Backseat drivers come in for plenty of condemnation, but it isn't every day they're made defendants in a suit for $25,000.

J. F. Culler, of Palmyra, seeks that amount from occupants of an automobile he says struck and seriously injured him. Four of the parties named are women, one of them allegedly "driving 50 miles an hour at the suggestion and command and direction of the others."

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Lawrence C. O'Brien, "gold coast" representative in the Illinois Legislature, convicted of evading income tax payments, was placed aboard a train last night bound for the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., to serve 18 months.

O'Brien, charged by the government with owing taxes in excess of $70,000, testified at his trial he thought the income of his trucking business was exempt because he was a state representative.

YOUTH ADMITS KILLING FRIEND

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—A 17-year-old boy who answered "Sure, I killed him," to a police accusation that he had slain for money his benefactor, Allen R. Schartzer, 32, a painter, was in jail today while authorities traced his movements back to a South Carolina reform school.

The youth, Cleveland Robertson, was arrested 12 hours after he is alleged to have shot and killed Schartzer to rob him. Police quoted Robertson as saying:

"I walked into his joint." He was painting. I went into the kitchen for some cookies and when I came out eating them I shoved a rod in his back. He sure looked surprised. He told me to quit kidding so I socked him with the gun. He got up and I socked him again. Then he got mad and made a pass at me so I shot him."

$15,000,000 Job Fund Voted in New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(INS.)—The Board of Estimate, on motion of Mayor Walker, yesterday formally passed legislation to provide $15,000,000 for the financing of jobs for the unemployed on public works.

The fund will be administered by the Emergency Work Commission, of which Cornelius N. Bliss is chairman, and whose membership includes J. P. Morgan, Ex-Gov. Al Smith and many prominent bankers.

UNIONS PUT RAIL WAGE CUT UP TO ROADS

Willard Calls Parley to Discuss Revised Scale; Must Provide More Jobs

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—The question of whether railway labor will accept a voluntary 10 per cent reduction has been shifted back to the railroad presidents by union representatives.

The presidents, as represented by Daniel Willard, head of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and chairman of the nine executives who met in New York recently, immediately accepted the union proposition. Willard said he had arranged to call a conference of all railway presidents early next week.

Without committing themselves, the 1,500 general chairmen representing the principal railway brotherhoods, last night "invited and urged" the presidents to meet with union leaders and negotiate an agreement.

MUST CREATE JOBS

The brotherhoods made it clear, however, that any agreement must be based upon measures to relieve unemployment and to better labor conditions, and they notified the railways that their representatives must be empowered to consider these matters.

Otherwise, the chairman said, union executives would be authorized "to take all the steps necessary for concerted and co-operative action in conformity with the provisions and spirit of the railway labor act to protect the interests of our membership in existing rates of pay and working conditions."

The unions made it clear that they wished to absorb unemployment among the ranks of labor by spreading their working hours, preferably by the adoption of a six-hour day. There are also other conditions, such as the elimination of railway crossings.

Railway presidents have already frowned upon these proposals.

PLAN CREDIT POOL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Taking their cue from the administration, railway executives yesterday recommended a credit corporation of their own to help needy lines over the business hill.

The 240 rail leaders present intend to take back to their directors for approval a plan for the creation of a non-profit corporation under Delaware laws. Its prime purpose will be to collect money for distribution to financially weak roads.

The funds would come from freight rate increases, estimated at more than $100,000,000 yearly, which the Interstate Commerce Commission recently allowed the roads.

DUKE REFUSED N. Y. LICENSE

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—A legal hurdle balked the marriage plans of the ninth Duke of Manchester yesterday and erased an engagement to officiate from Mayor Walker's social calendar.

The duke was refused a marriage license when he appeared at the municipal bureau with his fiancee, Miss Kathleen Dawes, former London actress.

A final divorce decree was granted to his first wife, the former Helena Zimmerman, of Cincinnati, while he was on the high seas en route here, the duke explained, and while he did not have the decree itself he could supply an affidavit that it had been entered by a court. The clerk inquired:

"On what grounds?"

"On statutory grounds for misconduct."

The clerk then informed him New York state law required that he wait three years for a license after such a divorce.

The duke said they would await the arrival of a certificate of the divorce decree before making further plans. Friends said they might go to Havana, a journey first planned as a wedding trip, and be married there.

BRADFORD, Pa., Dec. 12.—(AP.)—Charged with embezzlement of approximately $90,000 in city funds, Webster G. Drew, former city treasurer, was arrested late yesterday and following a preliminary hearing before Alderman Fred Nicholas, was released on $10,000 bond for his appearance again today.

Drew is out on $50,000 bond on another charge of embezzling about $122,000 in school funds. The warrant yesterday was sworn out by Joseph R. Carvelth, director of accounts and finance.

"The purpose of this meeting is to save the club from receivership. If you wish to see the club live, please attend."

Physician Fined, Ordered to Pay 'Army' $100

WELCH, W. Va., Dec. 12.—(AP.)—A Bluefield physician was fined $100 for contempt of court and then ordered to turn over the sum to the Salvation Army for relief work.

Judge Beno F. Howard in McDowell County Circuit Court held Dr. T. E. Vass, of Bluefield, in contempt of court yesterday after the physician had twice failed to answer a summons in the $25,000 damage suit of William Lockhart, Jr., against the Bluefield Sanitarium.

A deputy sheriff was sent for Vass and after he appeared Judge Howard fined him $100 and costs. The judge told Vass he would not be required to pay the costs if the $100 was given to the Salvation Army.

5 MEN HELD IN STORE ROBBERY

Five men were arrested in Arnold at 4 a. m. today as suspects in a drug store robbery, and five hours later were held for court on charges of entering a building, larceny and burglary.

Two Arnold patrolmen, James Lemon and George Frickanisce, stopped a car in which the five were riding and noticed, on the floor of the tonneau, a tin can bearing the label of the Arnold Drug Store, 1707 Fifth avenue, and containing a large amount of money, all in silver.

They took the men to jail and returned to the drug store, where they found two doors broken and the safe rifled. The owner of the store said $126.40 had been taken. Only $31.40 was found in the car.

As Lemon and Frickanisce were marching one of the men, Charles Morton, a Negro, of 208 Fourth avenue, Homestead, from the store, where, they said, he confessed the crime, a roll of bills slipped out of his shoe. It contained the other $99.

Arraigned before Justice of the Peace H. W. Kuhlman, the other four gave their names as Steve Pakacs, Superior avenue, Homestead Park; Jack Sninsky, 415 Third avenue, Homestead; Andrew Kovelcheck, 211 Ann street, Homestead, and John Muha, 112 West Twelfth street, Homestead.

DOLL LADY

Gets a Letter From a Woman With a Heart—
A Woman Who Asks All Other Women to Work For

"Honeybunch" Dolls

To Give Away to Little Girls Who Would Otherwise Be Unable to Get One For Christmas

Read the Doll Lady's Answer:—

Dear Little Girls and Grown-ups—

Cleopha Susella, 7326 Dennison Ave., Swissvale, the little girl with a pretty curl, gets her "Honeybunch" from the Doll Lady.

Yesterday there was a new and interesting suggestion made to me and it came from a woman with a heart. Heretofore all of my daily letters have been written exclusively for children. This one is partly for grown-ups in answer to her letter in which she says:

"Fortunately, we are in a position to buy our little girl all the dolls she needs. The thought occurred to me that there are a number of little girls who never owned a doll, whose parents or relatives are not in a position to buy them dolls, because of their circumstances, are even unable to conceive of the necessity of such pleasures on the part of a child.

"Now I don't need a doll for the children in my family. Santa Claus will take care of them. If, however, you will tell me what the little girls have to do to get one of your 'Honeybunch' dolls, I'll do what they have to do and get one or more of them. When I get these 'Honeybunches' I'll either turn them over to the Sun-Telegraph to give away or I'll find some lonesome little girls and give them to them for Christmas."

The Christmas spirit is surely well expressed in that letter and opens up an opportunity for many other grown-ups. If they will write to me, I'll tell them how they can get a "Honeybunch" to give away.

Now back to the little girls. When you get my "Honeybunch" in your arms, when you hear her soft baby cry, when you look into her flirting eyes, put your finger in her dimples; when you see her dainty organdy dress, her lace cap and little shoes and stockings to match; when you see how big this adorable "Honeybunch" really is and find out all the cute things she can really do, you are going to fall in love with her. And I hope she's going to be your playmate. Bear in mind that "Honeybunch" is about 20 inches tall—about as big as this newspaper page is long; she has rubber hands and arms and is really as unbreakable as a doll can be made.

Please don't wait until it is too late. If you want a "Honeybunch" all for yourself send me your name and address on the coupon below and I'll write you a letter telling how easy it is to get this big, magnificent doll. And I'll send you a picture in colors.

Here are the names of some of the little girls of Pittsburgh who have already taken home their "Honeybunch"—

Elizabeth Cole, 1307 Collier St.; Marie Critchlow, 1349 Woods Run Ave.; Margaret Tindle, 1416 Franklin St.; Betty Rapp, 1426 Beckham St.; Gertrude Hutchinson, 1435 Nixon St.; Dorothy Duffy, 1525 Lincoln Ave.; Rita McDermott, 2005 Carey Way; Dorothy J. Culbertson, 2007 Waverly Ave.; Dolores Valente, 2222 Penn Ave.; Ruth Nath, 2226 Spring Ave.; Jane C. Pummer, 2240 Gershon St.; Grace Durrand, 2241 Bedford Ave.; Dolores Shalon, 2318 Center St.

Here are the names of some of the little girls outside of Pittsburgh who have already secured "Honeybunch" for a playmate—Mildred White, Arnold; Clara Orris, Arnold; Ruth E. Murgel, Bridgeville; Dorothy Liberta, Broughton; Mary A. Bonham, Carnegie; Dorthe Urich, Duquesne; Anna Hornack, Monessen; Ida M. Patterson, Washington; Elaine Walls, Republic.

Woman Official Urges Job Insurance

Creation of unemployment reserves to stabilize industry was urged by Miss Frances Perkins industrial director of New York state in an address before the League of Women Voters in Carnegie Music Hall yesterday she said

"Industrial insurance if wisely planned and administered would be valuable in putting into the hands of wage earners at the beginning of a cyclical depression a certain amount of money they would spend on necessities and so keep alive the wage earner market as a bulwark against further depression"

Laurel Hears Love Passage Between Her Mother and Spanish Dancer

CHAPTER XX

Sunday morning at the country club.

Laurel—after her near-tragedy—had spent the night there, according to the order of her doctor.

The burns were not serious. But she had had a shock and must stay where she was that night. In the morning Dr. Harvey would come in and have a look at her.

That thought buoyed Laurel up. She slept rather fitfully. Each time she woke her mind winged to the incidents of the evening.

What had he THOUGHT of her?

Was she in love?

Was there any other name for this strange surge of emotion he aroused in her?

He was attracted to her. When she had regained consciousness and opened her eyes she had seen a tenderness in his eyes and yet a fire 'way in he bent over her.

She'd foster that. She wanted him. Wanted to bring that light into his eyes again. Wanted him to belong to her.

Was all this love? She'd never felt the same for anybody before. It had been nothing but "B. U." Biological Urge . . . with Roger.

Connie had stayed at the club all night, too. In an adjoining room, within the call of her daughter.

And Imogen, who adored to be "in" in everything, had grabbed the excuse of her friend's accident and Connie's hysteria in order to be Connie's guest . . . because I simply wouldn't DREAM of leaving you!"

She insisted on staying overnight, and of course in decency—although Connie didn't care for Imogen at all—Connie had to pay for her.

Connie was annoyed about the whole series of happenings.

Laurel and the good-looking Bruce Harvey—HER guest—out in the darkness for goodness knows how long, and evidently flirting!

CONNIE REVIEWS FACTS

Thereafter, when chided Laurel's impertinence to her mother . . .

Then the mad, Bacchanalian dance with Diaz, who was Connie's particular admirer!

That Laurel had looked beautiful in the frail chiffon draperies didn't dispel the fact that she had danced three-quarters naked!

Bold as brass she'd been, in her seductive postures. And Mr. Delahunt, and others remarked that Laurel had drunk too many cocktails . . .

Like a moth she'd fluttered, literally and metaphorically, close to the fire . . . had danced provocatively close to young Harvey.

Her dress—if one could call it such—had gone a-blaze and plunged the whole place into pandemonium.

Laurel's screams had sent Connie into hysteria. It had been a ghastly scene, and might have had a tragic denouement, if it hadn't been for the plucky, lightning-quick action of Bruce Harvey.

He'd burned his hands while beating out the blaze. Connie hoped that Laurel felt grateful to him.

Odd how—when she "came to"—Laurel didn't want her own mother near her . . .

She wanted to be alone with Bruce. A thought sped through Connie's brain—"Is Laurel in love with him?"

But Laurel had sneered at romance, many a time . . . laughed it to scorn . . . had classed all such feelings under the indelicate title of "biological urge."

B. U., these youngsters called it. Was that what Connie felt for . . . Diaz?

She looked at her wristwatch. It was 7 a. m. She'd better go in and have a look at Laurel who might be awake.

Connie slipped into an orchid peignoir, with "mules" to match, and walked through the communicating door.

Hello, Mums. Got a cigaret?"

Good morning, dear. Are you feeling better?"

I feel fine, except for a nip here and there.

Such a narrow escape! Imagine, Laurel, if you'd been disfigured!

Don't be a scare cat!" But Laurel shivered.

UNPLEASANT THOUGHTS

If her beauty had been blotted out. What then? She'd nothing in the world to take its place. It would have been the end of everything.

Only yesterday morning in one of the tabloids she'd read of a beautiful girl who'd been badly burned when out motoring.

The car she was riding in had crashed into something, and turned turtle.

The girl, a well-known artist's model, had been pinned under the wreckage.

But that wasn't all, bad as it was. The gas tank had exploded.

Flames had seared that lovely face and burned the skin from that exquisite body.

But the girl didn't die, though that would certainly have been the best solution in the circumstances.

She was in a hospital six months. And she lived on. Lived—horribly disfigured!

They'd grafted skin . . . inserted wax . . . and stitched, and sculptured.

One of her ex-employers had brought—for the surgeons' guidance—a little marble bust he had made of her.

They'd tried to follow that. Tried to shape the disfigured face into a semblance of its former exquisite contours.

In vain! Tragedy had triumphed over genius.

And now the girl, bereft of everything—for she'd been one of the type "beautiful but dumb"—had to face life, hideous!

That might have happened to herself. She ought to be giving paeans of praise to the quick action of her doctor!

Beyond her beauty—miraculously saved—Laurel told herself she, too, had nothing to offer.

Connie went back to bed, having provided Laurel with the necessary cigarets, and adjuring her only to smoke one of them.

Laurel lay quietly, the morning sun shining athwart her.

Presently she dozed off. She awoke to voices immediately underneath the open window at the bedhead.

Came Diaz' tone. She heard him say, softly albeit passionately—"Darling, do not be angry with me! It is only YOU I live . . ."

"You mean that? Honestly?" a woman murmured.

Heavens! It was the voice of HER MOTHER!

Diaz . . . and Connie!

Diaz was Connie's LOVER!

Impossible! Incredible!

But—immediately below her bedroom window—that was the voice of Laurel's mother.

Laurel sat up in bed, as though hypnotized. The world seemed whirling about her.

So this—THIS explained Connie's hostile, green-eyed look last night when she had been doing the exhibition dance with Diaz . . .?

Connie . . . her own mother . . . Connie was JEALOUS!

Those stories Freddie had told, about Mrs. Delahunt . . . about the middle-aged woman in Paris!

So they were true . . . true . . . TRUE.

What was the hateful phrase he had employed?

Ageing and Amorous.

Connie was all of 46. A good 20 years old than Diaz.

It wasn't true? It COULDN'T be! Connie to have fallen for him . . . for a dance instructor!

Involuntarily Laurel leaned nearer to that open window.

She prayed it hadn't been her mother's voice. She sat there, spellbound . . . rigid.

It came again. Laurel went white. "You love me? You're SURE you love me? You aren't just . . . kidding?"

It floated up to Laurel. Connie's voice . . . the eternal feminine pleading!

I love you! I am . . . what you call it? . . . CRAZ-EE about you!" from Diaz.

And at that horror-stricken though she'd been, Laurel was galvanized to action.

She got out of bed regardless of the "nips" of last night's burns, determined to slam down the window.

Hear no more! Dad! Mother! DIAZ! It was a nightmare!

She'd look on it as such! A fictment of her brain! SHE was no eavesdropper!

But she stood there by the open sill, the morning air caressing her.

A butterfly hovered on the window ledge. There was a shorn field on this side of the grounds. The light quivered above the stubble.

And over to the left, among the woods, was the pool where Bruce and she had lingered.

Youth! Romance! And NOW—this intrigue! Against her own volition, her own sense of fair play, Laurel leaned out over the window ledge.

Her mother . . . still in that orchid peignoir! Two arms about her mother! They belonged to DIAZ!

* * *

Eleven a. m. The weekend slumberers in the Country Club were stirring.

Some of them, that is to say. Others would sleep up to a belated luncheon.

Laurel's door opened, and in walked Imogen.

"Hello, you young upsetter of the peace!" Imogen had a cigaret dangling from the corner of her mouth. Imogen looked nonchalant.

"Hello, yourself, Im! How's tricks?"

"Well, I must say you gave us a nice fright last night."

"Quit razzing me, Im! Be your temperature?"

"You put everybody's temperature up by 20 points, I'll tell the world. Gee, what a she-mozzle!"

"You intrigue me, deah! For once in my life, then I was the center of attraction?" drawled Laurel.

"And HOW! And whoops! I'm here to say I've never seen such a show."

"Oh, be yourself, Imogen!"

"Now don't get peevish, kid. How are the burns?"

"They're going along fine."

Imogen sat down at the bedside. She pressed the stub of her cigaret out, on the window ledge, and helped herself to a fresh one from Laurel's package.

"Grand little scene! And what a gorgeous denouement!"

"Speak English, please."

"I'll say it in 50 languages, old dear. Bruce Harvey rescued you, and then he bandaged our Lady Godiva!"

"Was I as bad at that? I mean, Im, was the dress actually burned off me?"

Crimson had flown to Laurel's face.

But she must know . . . only Imogen was so full of innuendo . . . "Won't you tell me?"

"Just what DID happen, Im?"

"Well, he flung a cloak around you, like Sir Walter What's-his-name with Queen Elizabeth."

"That was because she wanted to step across a muddy road."

"It's the same thing in this case!"

"How?" Laurel stirred uneasily, eyeing the speaker.

"Because all the darn cats are only too glad to throw mud at you!"

"Meaning that I was almost nude?"

"Pretty much so. But what do you care since you've come through with only a burn or two, and made a whoops of a sensation?"

Imogen took a long puff at her cigaret. She was torn between finesse and curiosity.

"Say, spring the news! W happened after the doctor carted you off?"

"I don't remember, Im."

"M'm?" Mrs. Greene said—(Mrs. Greene was the woman who had been a nurse and who had assisted Bruce in bandaging) that you weren't long unconscious."

"What else did she say?"

"That the first thing you did when you came to was order her out of the bedroom . . ."

"Well, d'you blame me? She's a nosey cat."

"She was mighty sore, I tell you, after she'd played the part of Good Samaritan . . ."

"Let her be sore. What do I care?"

"Nor I. Only the whole club's talking."

Laurel was shocked when she recognized her mother's voice.

"It isn't marriage! It isn't anything!"

Nevis Lancaster finally was aroused to protest against the futility of the life in which she and her handsome, bond salesman husband became involved . . . gadding about . . . spending . . . philandering with other men and women . . . SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Thousands of children hurried through their regular Saturday morning chores today in order to attend the meetings of the 16 chapters of the Warner Theaters-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club. These meetings, held every Saturday at the Warner neighborhood theaters, are looked forward to with eager anticipation by members of the club.

At each of the 16 theaters today, the Grand Jester and Board of Governors opened the meeting with patriotic songs and reading of the club pledge:

"I pledge loyalty to my country, obedience to my parents, love for my fellow playmates. I will be honest and truthful in school and on the playground—wherever I may be. I will respect my elders. I will do my best to spread good cheer."

Then came contests, with attractive prizes to the winners; entertainment by members of the club; special stage show, and other features. When the meetings were over the children remained for the regular feature picture program of the day.

SYNOPSIS—Tuba is playing Tuba, Lucy Mulch, pretty co-ed, has promised to marry the captain of the wrecking train—although she secretly loves Fred, lamplighter, who has the reputation of being an old scrouge, but really is as nice a fella as you'll meet (barring chemistry in any school).

"WHAT are you cooking up, you delicious minx?" said Freemantle Godwall to Lucy Mulch. With a curt nod, she answered busily, "I'm making some biscuits for the team's lunch." "It's nigh onto noon now," said Godwall, and with a petulant cry, she hurriedly baked the biscuits and took a trolley to the stadium. On her arrival she bustled onto the field, which was strangely empty of players. "Ah, but this is indeed odd!" she murmured, and noticed a note pinned to the football. "When you find this," it said, "we will be far away. Do not try to find us. It is better not." It was signed, "The Team." With a worried frown Lucy tucked the biscuits more firmly under her arm. All at once. . . .

Points of the President's Message

Number THREE

The President's annual message to Congress states that our Army has been "MAINTAINED IN A HIGH STATE OF EFFICIENCY."

This astounding statement is flatly contradicted by the following disclosure in the annual report of Gen. MacArthur, as CHIEF OF STAFF:

"The dispersion of the Regular Army in small detachments throughout continental United States makes it impracticable to have immediately available an adequate, balanced and efficient force of regular troops to meet the first phases of emergency.

"The few infantry troops in the United States available for immediate field service are distributed among 24 regiments located at 45 different posts with a battalion or less at 34.

"Artillery troops are in a similar situation. They are distributed among seven regiments and seven separate battalions located at 19 different posts with a battalion or less at 16.

"Under such conditions, combined tactical training in the Regular Army alone is rendered most difficult."

As a result of the military inefficiency so vividly portrayed by the chief of staff, we have today smaller combat forces available for defense than are permitted to Germany, defeated in the great war, and trampled to extinction under the iron heel of dominant and domineering France.

Even what we have are so scattered and so involved in the "housekeeping" of so many small garrisons that efficient training for these combat forces is out of the question.

Under such conditions, companies of 16 to 24 soldiers turn out for combat instruction and battalions can seldom get together more than 150 men, or less than a war strength company.

In other words, we have sacrificed that emergency force which Gen. Pershing warns us is so ESSENTIAL TO OUR DEFENSE IN WAR.

Furthermore, we have done nothing toward mechanizing and motorizing what is left of our little Army,—NOTHING TOWARD MODERNIZING ITS ARMS AND EQUIPMENT.

Tremendous advances along all these lines have been made since the great war, but our little Army remains armed and equipped just about as it was in that conflict.

Yet arms and equipment are just as vital to the effectiveness of a combat force as its organization, distribution and unit strength.

In view of the fact that the truth about the present plight of our military establishment has LONG BEEN A MATTER OF OFFICIAL RECORD IN THE WAR DEPARTMENT, it is hard to understand how Mr. Hoover could assure the Congress that he is maintaining our Army in "a high state of efficiency."

No administration strengthens itself in the confidence of Congress or the country by falling a victim to wrong information.

For as our own Ralph Waldo Emerson once said:

"The people know that they need in their representative much more than talent — namely, THE POWER TO MAKE HIS TALENT TRUSTED."

Payroll Padding

Council Will Render a Valuable Service If It Abolishes Sinecures in the City Government.

Councilman Charles Anderson's remark that "there are a lot of white collar men in the Highways and Sewers Bureau who haven't done two minutes' work for the city" has placed the question of payroll padding squarely before the Council. There has been so much of this kind of talk that Council owes it to the people to conduct an investigation, and if it finds sinecures to abolish them.

Getting rid of positions in the municipal government which require no work, but are given to friends of the administration as rewards for political service not only would ease the taxpayers' burden, but would be beneficial to hard-working city employes. With padding removed from the payroll there would be less necessity for a cut in the wages of the real workers.

The Associated Press reports that most Pennsylvania cities have succeeded in reducing their budgets for 1932 below the 1931 figures. There will be grumbling over some of the cuts in the appropriations, but the grumbling would be a roar if they had not been made, as the parades and mass-meetings in Philadelphia which forced the Council to lop $12,500,000 from the budget bear witness.

It is gratifying to see some of the department heads co-operating with Council in the effort to reduce expenses. Here is Dr. James S. Hammers, superintendent of the city home at Mayview, pointing out, for example, how money can be saved in its administration. If there were more whole-hearted co-operation all the way around, wonders could be accomplished.

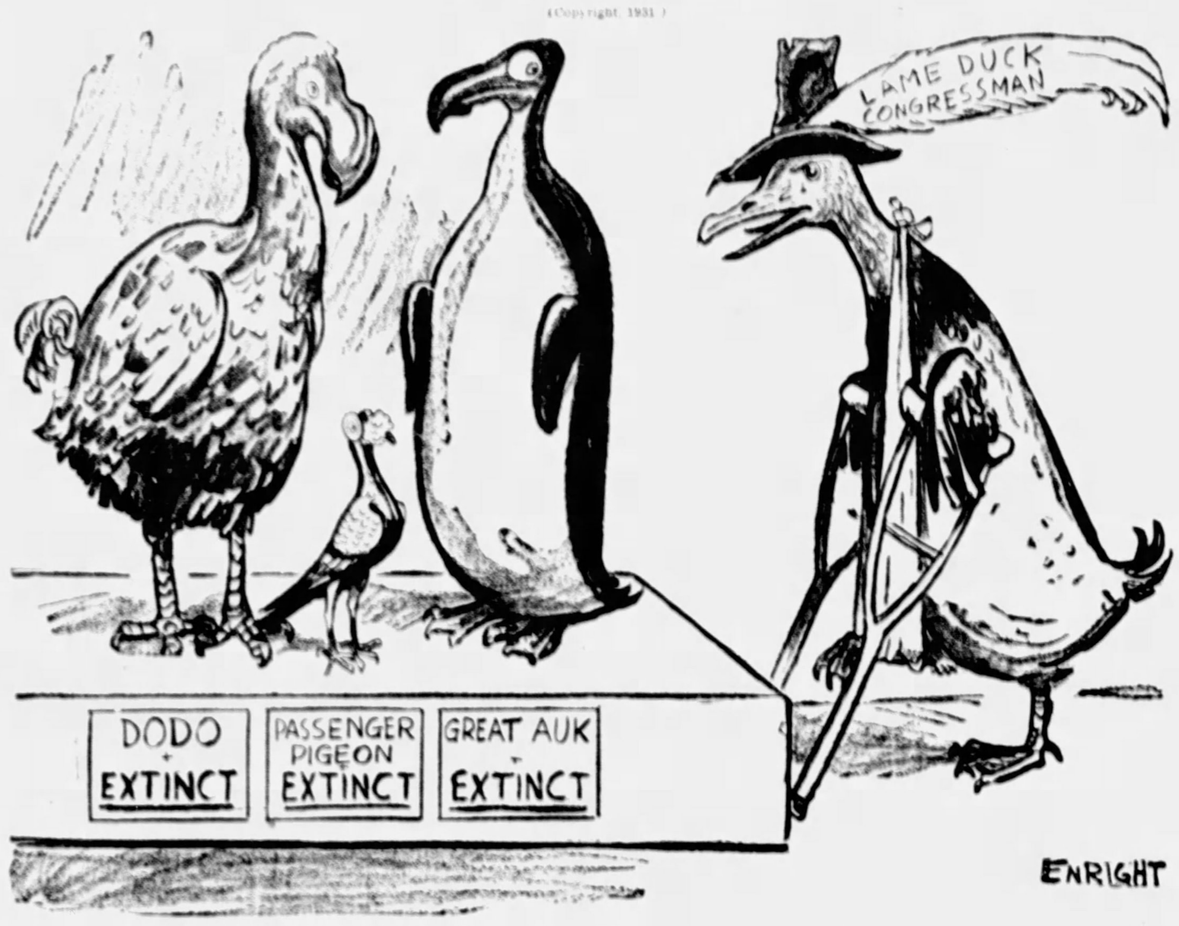
Senator David A. Reed sees no merit in the proposal that the United States place an embargo on all Soviet products. To understand all that is involved in the proposal you should read the series of articles on Russia that are to run in the March of Events Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph beginning tomorrow. These articles show that the Russian threat to America's trade is a bogey.

If you like light and color and exotic scenes, you will enjoy the paintings of a young Pittsburgh artist, Richard Crist, of Aspinwall, which are to be reproduced in the Color Gravure Section of the Sun-Telegraph tomorrow. They are water color pictures of Mexican life, as seen by Mr. Crist in Cuernavaca and Taxco. His work is highly praised by critics.

A Pittsburgh Social worker, defending prohibition several years ago, declared she and her colleagues never had to deal any more with the drunken mother of the slums, who was one of their gravest problems before the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment. The drunken mother of the slums is again becoming a police court figure. That plea for prohibition ceases to carry weight.

"Move Over!"

(Copyright, 1931.)



Our Congressional "lame ducks" are headed for just where they belong, the antiquary section of the National Museum beside the dodo, the great auk and the passenger pigeon.

The Senate repeatedly passed the Norris resolution amending the Federal Constitution to do away with "lame duck" sessions only to have it held up by House reactionaries. Finally the House passed the bill at the last session. Now it must be submitted to the State Legislatures for ratification. And the present Congress should speed it on its way.

The Norris amendment directs that Congress convene on January 4 following its election and the new President and Vice President take office on January 24 following election.

This would eliminate the thirteen-month interval that now takes place between the election of a new Congress and its convening in regular session.

The Norris amendment should have been written into the Federal Constitution long ago.

Don't Handicap Business With Heavy Taxes!

By B. C. FORBES

WHEN a wagon or motor becomes stuck in the mud, it takes far more force to extract it than it takes to keep the vehicle going once it starts. Likewise, far more power is necessary to start a heavy train moving than is necessary to keep it going once it gets under way.

American prosperity is stuck in the mud. The supreme objective of the government and of every responsible citizen must be to get things moving again.

The Hoover-Mellon tax proposals are not calculated to move business off its dead center and start it moving forward.

What is the wisest course for Congress to pursue under present depressing circumstances?

Surely the supreme objective should be to induce business to begin to move. The taxation burdens recommended by the administration are altogether too heavy. They are not calculated to stimulate a business and industrial advance. Rather are they likely to push industry and employment deeper into the mire.

AUTHORITIES state that the government in recent years has reduced its obligations by $3,500,000,000 more than necessary. Secretary Mellon doubtless was wise to reduce the public debt drastically while the nation was enjoying a boom.

But should not the administration completely alter its action now that progress is at a standstill and things are going the wrong way?

Why should not taxation burdens be lightened to the uttermost? Why should not taxpayers now receive the full benefit of their excess payments of $3,500,000,000?

"Pay as you go" is ordinarily a sound policy. If we, as taxpayers, had done nothing more than meet absolutely necessary obligations during our years of prosperity, then it would have been fair enough to call upon us to make national ends meet now. But we anticipated our obligations to the tune of three-and-a-half billions.

Having done this, are we not entitled, now that we are struggling to keep solvent, to credit for our excess payments?

THE main objective of the government and everybody else should be, not to increase the load now that prosperity and business are stuck in the mire, but to do everything possible to get a forward movement started.

That can best be done by lightening our load, not aggravating it.

In plain language, the government should not hesitate to ease our present grievous burdens by raising part of our national financial needs by issuing bonds. Having laid up $3,500,000,000 of "fat," why not draw substantially upon it during these lamentably lean days?

If prosperity can be set in motion, it will be relatively easy for taxpayers to meet all governmental demands. If not, not.

Is it not very clear, therefore, that our statesmen should go to the limit of practicability in encouraging the resumption of activity?

FACED with a presidential election, the administration will commit suicide if it insists upon inflicting needlessly embarrassing levies upon taxpayers during the coming year. The Democratic party, anxious to ascend the seat of power, has already intimated that the Hoover-Mellon tax recommendations are altogether too heavy to be borne under present harassing conditions.

Would it not be logical to reason that the party whose tax plans appeal most to the public is likely to be the party favored at the polls next November by taxpayers?

Paging Santa Claus

Christmas shopping is a mental test, in which many women and most men prove that they need an alienist.

THE MAIDEN'S CHRISTMAS PRAYER

Dear Santa Claus, hear now a woman's prayer.
Bring me the things that my heart desires
A laugh for my lips—a glint in my hair
And the slender form that my love admires!

A magical perfume, his fancy to charm,
A frock that will ravish and dazzle his eye—

The touch of his lips and the clasp of his arm—
These are the things for which I sigh!

Fairy slippers, to make me dance
As lightly as thistledown in the wind—
A snare in my smile and a lure in my glance
Of challenge—or promise O YOU know the kind!

Keep your baubles and bangles and rings,
Trinkets and trash—your stock, entire.
Bring me the foolish, intangible things
That will set that silly man's heart on fire!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—I just rounded in from one of those teas to turn out this screed. And somehow it's no task at all. I approach it as deftly as a fisherman trolling for pickerel or an esthetic dancer leaping for a buttercup.

As a rule such sundown gatherings offer merely a hunk of boredom. But this was different. O, vastly. It started in customary fashion. Around 5 o'clock celebrity gluttons began drifting in, greeting the host, thumbing sandwiches, accepting tea and pairing off into groups.

There were polite murmurings over the latest play, the newest book and usual psychoanalytical twaddle about thumb sucking and what not. Here and there in self conscious array were a best selling novelist, a Reno divorcee, a British playwright. And a sprinkling of Saturday Evening Post readers.

At the start there was the cheerfulness of the swamp. Men began to glance at wrist watches and ladies drifted toward exists for getaways, when folding doors opened and a brace of butlers with gadgets sprouting down their cheeks brought in an enormous bowl of pink punch.

The host clapped for attention. "Before you depart," he said, "I want you to taste a perfectly harmless mixture. It comes from an ancient recipe my nephew brought from Samoa. It's altogether harmless and you'll enjoy it."

Everybody, save myself, stepped up for a swig. In less than 15 minutes what had been a stupid affair combusted into gaseous jollity. A middle-aged matron, off in a corner gloomily discussing Spinoza, began suddenly to twitter like a canary.

Any moment I expected her to beat herself against window panes. A tittupy gentleman tried to bow to a marble statue and did a nip-up on a sliding Armenian rug. Another sedate fellow, for no reason, began holding a long, wavering note like Ethel Merman. A pretty how-de-do, heigh ho and how have you been!

* * *

Missing the gentleman who brought me, I found him crumpled in a pathetic heap in an alcove sobbing. I inquired the reason for the tempest. He choked. "Someone dared me to say 'Bugs black blood' twice quickly and something's the matter. I think I've had a nervous breakdown. Listen: "Blugs black bloog, blucks blag glug!" See, I can't do it." And he went off into another hand-wringing moan.

* * *

At this, his wife came in and turned white at his anguishing. "He's all right," I comforted. "That Samoa juice made his tongue thick and he can't say 'Blugs glag blug.'" I mean 'Gluss glack slug.'" And did I feel the ninny!

* * *

It was time to exit, so I retrieved hat and stick and went to tell the host goodbye. He stood poker-stiff in a doorway, blotto. "So long," I said. "It's eight minutes of two," he mumbled. "And take your eye out of my thumb." What a drink! On the way out I dipped myself a stiff Samoan snort and downed it in a gulp to see what it was like. It reminded me of the sassafras tea with which grandma used to dose me for hives. But all of a sudden the place seemed filled with pals. I certainly hated to leave.

* * *

The only reason I shook hands with the elevator man and walked over and gave the telephone girl a quick hug is I'm democratic that way and kind to the folks. Plain old Odd! O, yes, on the way home I stopped in and bought my wife a pearl fretted banjo.

* * *

But when I go out for diversion what does she do? Only three guesses to each person. Children in arms barred. Ushers will now pass among you. Well, for one thing she switches letters on my typewriter. You know, where the n used to be? It's gone and she's stuck in a great big K. And I just remember that bum at the tea pointing to me and saying to a lady: "What kind of a trap do they set to catch that?" I'd like to go back and snap my finger under his dirty mustache and inquire: "What fooling rot is this?"

* * *

Some day I'm sailing to Samoa where people can drink and keep their heads. I'd go tonight if my feet weren't asleep. Fred Keating thinks he's smart with magic tricks. I can do all his and ride without holding to the handlebars beside. In fact the way I feel I'll fly Lindbergh a nickel an ocean.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

"Why," said I to him, "don't you like to work with women in business?"

"Because they're static." He grinned. I bristled.

"Oh, for heaven's sake—I suppose you mean that old notion about women dragging Sex Appeal into business. But that's so stupid! It's disgusting to use an argument like that. An intelligent, self-respecting woman doesn't use Sex Appeal in business any more than a man."

"I'm not saying she does. It's just like you women to jump to an assumption and get all smoked up over it. By 'static' I didn't mean sex. But I did mean emotion. I don't like to work with women in business because they inject emotion into it."

"But men are emotional, too—"

"Of course they are. But they've learned how to handle their emotions in business. They think things through—"

"Do you mean to say that women don't think? That's not fair. Women have just as good brains as men. They may not have had as much business training but—"

"That's just the point. I'm not denying that women have brains. But they haven't learned how to STAND their brains. They can't take their own intelligence as a matter of course. They can't forget their brains . . . do team work. And so when they try to work with men in business, there's trouble."

"What kind of trouble? I guess you mean that men resent it because women are often smarter than they?" This time I grinned. He bristled.

"Well, I guess that's so—sometimes," he conceded reluctantly. "But what I meant was this. Take four men discussing a business deal. They'll sit down. Make themselves comfortable. Light their pipes or cigars. Ease into the propostion gradually. Tell a few good stories. Kid each other a while. Swap golf scores. Then gradually work their way around to the reason for the meeting.

"All this while, of course, each man will have his own idea of what he wants to do and will be sparring for his opening. But he doesn't get burnt up while he is waiting. He is used to that sort of thing . . . All the men before him have been used to it. Business doesn't get his goat—not if he's a regular fellow. He takes it as part of the day's work."

"Well—doesn't a woman? Even if women aren't as used to business as men, they have hung up some mighty fine records."

"I know they have. But they go at it differently. Women, in business, are much more intense than men. They use themselves up more than men. They get personal and excited—Take those four men doing business. Generally speaking, as long as men are working with men, things go easily. They may put some swift ones over on each other. They may drive each other into tight corners. But they don't lose their heads while they're doing it.

"But let a woman come into the situation. She may be just as smart as the men—even smarter. But from the minute she enters the combination, she starts complications. Know how the air gets charged with electricity sometimes—until everything crackles if you touch it? That's what most women do to a business situation. Even if a woman doesn't open her mouth you can actually FEEL the excitement that's in her—the suspicion and resentment—the determination to have her say and get her own way.

"Women can't touch business without getting personal. And the minute you get personal about a business deal, there's trouble. That's what I called 'static.' And that's why men don't like to work with women in business."

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Veil Withdrawn

What wrought the change, when sunset kissed the hills
And all the heavens flamed with sudden light
Of colors the transcendent Artist spills
Across the pathway of the coming night?
The contours of the crests against the sky,
The emerald robe the shielding cedars made
Were each unchanged to the accustomed eye,
Unchanged the valley where the river strayed.

And yet it was as though a lifted voice
Had fallen on my inmost being's ear,
And this the thought it spoke: "Rejoice, rejoice,
That to your eyes such splendor can appear;
Soon it must pass, must wane and then be gone,
But now see Beauty's face, the veil withdrawn!"

EDWIN B. FROST

By Archibald Henderson

One of the most extraordinary figures in the annals of astronomy is Dr. Edwin B. Frost, blind now for more than 10 years. In 1905 he entered upon a 15-year program of stellar observation, to classify and determine the velocities of the stars in Orion constellation.

About 1920, blindness set in, the retina of one eye "floating off" and a cataract forming on the other eye. Despite this apparently insuperable handicap, Frost has continued to keep abreast of current work in astronomy, not only in the United States but throughout the world. With the aid of his wife and a secretary, he succeeds in accomplishing a great deal of work.

He co-ordinates the program of study at the Yerkes Observatory, and occasionally publishes works produced in collaboration with others. In January, 1931, for example, he published a study of the radial velocities of 500 stars, in collaboration with other members of the staff of the observatory.

Edwin B. Frost was born in Brattleboro, Vt., on July, 1866. He received his A. B. at Dartmouth in 1886, and prosecuted advanced studies in physics and astronomy at Princeton, Potsdam and Strassburg. From 1887 until 1898 he was a member of the faculty at Dartmouth College. From 1898 until 1905, as professor of astrophysics, he prosecuted his studies at Yerkes Observatory.

When Prof. George Ellery Hale, director of the Yerkes Observatory, was called to head the Mount Wilson Observatory at Pasadena in 1905, he was succeeded by Dr. Frost in the post which the latter still holds. Since that date the two greatest observatories have maintained the closest co-operation in their programs of research. The publication of both have appeared very largely in the Astrophysical Journal, published by the University of Chicago and edited since 1905 by Prof. Frost.

One of Prof. Frost's most important pieces of work has been done on the Orion group of stars. This work, industriously carried on for a period of 15 years, could not be carried on satisfactorily at other smaller observatories. In the Yerkes collection there are now over 50,000 photographs and spectrograms of various parts of the heavens and of numerous celestial objects. According to Prof. Frost these pictures, valuable as they are today, will be even more valuable to astronomers a thousand years from now.

Dr. Frost is not in sympathy with contemporary astronomers of the stamp of Eddington and Jeans, who hold that the universe is "running down." He adheres to the view that there are larger cycles by which the disintegrated products of radiation are re-synthesized.

It has recently been pointed out that Dr. Frost, naturally of religious temperament, finds no inconsistency in the conception of a dominant spiritual power behind the universe. "If the universe and its energy are immortal," he recently said, "should not spirit also be as enduring? It is, by definition, without the limitation of mass, space or time, and thus not subject to space perception. Supernatural phenomena are not involved; nature itself is marvelous enough. To me, this leads to a certain serenity of thought, somewhat like that which Einstein has recently described as 'a cosmic religious sense.'"
